Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

I was pointing out the lefts hypocrisy. Not blaming Bush. Of course everything is now Obamas fault. He said he would fix them but continued the insane spending and continued the wars and un constitutional acts.

I don't ignore the rest of NATO. We were talking about Obama and someone Pro war, anti war... He's pro reality. In the real world shit happens and has to be dealt with. Your utopian vision of how it should be is all very nice, but sometimes, someone, somewhere has to use a big stick. Deal with it!

Hang on!

Are you the same Seon who was bitching a few weeks ago about the US doing nothing to capture Osama Bin Laden?

The US goes after Bin Laden, and his supporters into Pakistan and now you're all righteous about it?

Ok. So where are your (false) accusations that Nicolas Sarkozy is a war criminal?

I see lots of crap about Bush and Obama. Apparently you are happy that French fighter jets are accidentally bombing Libyan kids.

Yes. True. Bleeding obvious, but true.

And... so what?

Not a war crime!

children being indiscriminately killed by the Libyan military?

Wow! I thought I was heartless. I am dwarfed by your shadow.

juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

tard boy shit in his own short panties again:

> Yes, he

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

That trial will be held at approximately the same time the one on his COLB was...i.e., neveer as the courts will reject it also.
Fortunately the courts seem to be benched with people with working brains.

WNutD is noted for publishing rumors and made up stories. Rarely do any of their "hot news" stories hold water. There reputation is only slightly above what used to be the "News" tabloid.

I love the fantasy scenarios you birthers/troofers/other kooks keep dreaming up, they are hilarious. They won't ever happen, but you keep on dreaming they will. And that's always funny.

Yeah, it must kill the birthtards and other kooks when their claims aren't taken seriously. I wish one of the judges would just out and out

Yes, on some undeveloped property, I had antennas I had collected for years, used them to repair and make new ones from the parts, tubing, etc.

The crooks found them in an unlocked barn and hauled 'em all off ... some businesses, schools, etc. have had major vandalism/theft of major amounts of copper plumbing and wiring ...

The central valley of California is like a 3rd world country. They even steal the rear license plate off your car, your garbage can full of drink containers, lawn garden equipment, hoses, decorations, fountains ...

You wonder what it is going to be like when it gets worse ... already car thefts, purse snatchings, muggings, etc. just don't make the paper ... they are too numerous and the "civic fathers" (I use that term VERY LOOSELY!) to be worthy of any mention ... I thought this was the arsehole of he world, but in speaking to others, it is going on everywhere in California ...

Apparently Muammar Gaddafi has armed a good portion of those "poor abused civilians" with fully automatic weapons ...

I don't think we are going to be able to help them now, most Americans are not as well armed ... but if I was military ground forces, I'd worry
... they best keep bombing those civilians, they are pissed and into protecting their country!

Thanks, good post.

The real point here is these morons who attempt to argue by attacking the messenger, instead of the message -- they can't. However, this is the cheap tricks which our government is using on us, and these morons here are a very good example of what kind of idiot imbecile uses such tactics and demonstrates the respect we should be giving government -- the same as we give these imbeciles ...

Hey, schmuck, that comment on the neutrality of the article is from YOUR source. You should try reading the damn thing before you cite it.

Tell the GOP No Social Security or Medicare Cuts

http://www.dccc.org/

At this moment, Speaker Boehner is crafting a deficit deal that would gut Medicare and Social Security, while slashing benefits for seniors and the middle class in order to make sure he protects tax breaks for millionaires. Sign our petition right now and join House Democrats in declaring that Social Security and Medicare cuts are off the table.

Take Action | Tell the GOP No Social Security or Medicare Cuts

http://dccc.org/newsroom/entry/fact_check_kevin_mccarthy_falsely_claims_the_republican_plan_would_save_soc/

FACT CHECK: Kevin McCarthy Falsely Claims the Republican Plan Would Save Social Security
Today on CNN's State of the Union, Republican Whip Kevin McCarthy claimed House Republicans have a plan to "save" Social Security. When asked whether Republicans would look to reform Social Security, McCarthy said: "We're not passing it up. We put it in our budget."

In reality, after Republicans tried to privatize Social Security as of their budget, House Republican leaders--NRCC Chairman Pete Sessions (TX-32) and Republican Conference Chairman Jeb Hensarling, introduced a plan that would end Social Security as we know it--a risky privatization scheme that would gamble seniors' retirement on Wall Street.

FACT CHECK:

House Republicans Propose Social Security Privatization. On June 3, 2011, Pete Sessions introduced the Savings Account for Every American Act of 2011, a bill to partly privatize Social Security and let workers opt out of the program. As of July 10, 2011, the legislation only had Republican co-sponsors. [H.R. 2109, 6/3/11; Dallas Morning News, 6/12/11]

Dallas Morning News: Dow's fall shows peril of changing Social Security. "The stock market fell again Friday, marking a six-week slump. That's bad news for investors" and bad timing for Dallas Rep. Pete Sessions and others who want to transform Social Security by creating investment accounts for workers. Sessions, who runs the Republican congressional campaign effort, has been pushing as long as he's been in the House to partly privatize Social Security. Indeed, after President George W. Bush's failed push for a similar plan early in his second term, most Republicans backed away from the idea."☐ [Dallas Morning News, 6/12/11]

Republican Plan Would 'Destroy' Medicare and Social Security. The National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare discussing the Ryan/Republican plan wrote, "In short, it is a budget plan which decimates Social Security and Medicare in the name of deficit reduction." The only thing new about this strategy, is the fact that Rep. Ryan isn't shy about acknowledging that he believes seniors should foot the bill for our current economic nightmare "Destroying Social Security and Medicare, under the guise of deficit reduction, isn't about creating sound economic policy it's just more of the same old privatization politics, rewrapped, repackaged and rejected by the American people just two years ago."☐ [NCPSSM, 2/3/10]

Washington Post's Ezra Klein: Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security are Privatized. According to the Washington Post's Ezra Klein, "To move us to surpluses, Ryan's budget proposes reforms that are nothing short of violent. Medicare is privatized. Seniors get a voucher to buy private insurance, and the voucher's growth is far slower than the expected growth of health-care costs. Medicaid is also privatized. The employer tax exclusion is fully eliminated, replaced by a tax credit that grows more slowly than medical costs. And beyond health care, Social Security gets guaranteed, private accounts that CBO says will actually cost more than the present arrangement, further underscoring how ancillary the program is to our budget problem." [Washington Post, 2/1/10]

Center for American Progress: Privatizes Medicare and Social Security. In February, Pat Garofalo writing for the Center for American Progress' Wonk Room called the Republican proposal, "a radical budget proposal that eliminates long-term deficits by essentially privatizing Medicare and Social Security and placing arbitrary, non-specific freezes on all non-discretionary spending."☐ [Center for American Progress, 2/6/10]

"High-level engineer demonstrates how Nordyke birth certificates used as template.

A prominent software engineer claims the Obama birth certificate released by the White House was forged by using as templates the birth certificates of twins born in Hawaii one day after the president.

The engineer, a high-level programmer for a state government, spoke on condition of anonymity but contends his analysis is self-evident. He previously, as WND reported, presented evidence that the signature of Obama's mother on the president's document is proof of fraud.

Jerome Corsi's new book, "Where's the Birth Certificate?", is now available for immediate shipping, autographed by the author, only from the WND Superstore

He believes forgers used the registration numbers of the birth certificates belonging to Gretchen and Susan Nordyke, 10637 and 10638, to create the Obama birth certificate number, 10641.

Exhibits 1 and 2 show the Nordyke twins' birth certificate numbers in the original photostat format in which the Hawaii Department of Health released the documents to Mrs. Nordyke in 1966.

Exhibit 2: Gretchen Carter Nordyke, birth certificate number 10638

Exhibits 3 and 4 show Gretchen Carter Nordyke's birth certificate number in a positive developed from the original Hawaii DOH-issued photostatic copy.

Exhibit 3: Susan Elizabeth Nordyke, birth certificate number 10637, positive

Exhibit 4: Gretchen Carter Nordyke, birth certificate number 10638, positive

Exhibit 5 shows the Obama birth certificate number 10641, in which the numbers 61 and 106 appear to match in size, positioning and spacing the numbers on the Nordyke twins' birth certificates.

Exhibit 5: Barack Obama, birth certificate number 10641

"The '61' and the '1063' were copied directly as an image from a Nordyke birth certificate number, most likely in Adobe software," the software engineer asserted to WND. "Then the '3' was turned to a '4,' and the last '1' was appended to the number sequence as a separate image."

The transference of the Nordyke birth certificate number to the Obama document was a multi-step process, he said.

"The forger could not paste the Nordyke birth certificate number directly into the Obama document, because the fourth number in the '10637' or '10638' sequence needed to be changed to a '4,' and a '1' had to be added onto the end, so the Obama birth certificate number would read '10641.'"

Since the short-form Certification of Live Birth released during the 2008 campaign listed Obama's birth certificate number as 10641, any forger obviously would have to make the long-form birth certificate the same number.

WND reported that the Obama birth certificate number is out of sequence ï¿½ a higher number than the Nordyke twins were issued, even though the Obama birth certificate was registered at an earlier date.

Changing the "3" to a "4," as opposed to creating a new "4" and pasting it into the sequence, was a preferable strategy, he said, because altering the existing number would allow a forger to maintain the digit's spacing with the other numbers in the sequence, as well as the digit's width and height.

"To transform the '3' into a '4' took a multiple-step process," he explained. "The forger began by filling out the curve at the base of the '3,' preparing to transform it into a '4.' Since when did a '4' ever have a curve at the base? This alone is a clear sign of the forgery."

Working in MSPaint, he illustrated the point, showing how a forger would have filled out the curve at the base of the Nordyke '3,' preparing to transform it into the '4' on the Obama birth certificate, as shown in Exhibit 6.

Next, as seen in Exhibit 7, a forger would have filled in the curve, forming a straight-line base, as seen in the Obama "4" baseline on the right.

From there, as seen in Exhibit 8, the top and the front of the "3" would be filled in, continuing the transformation of the number into a "4."

Exhibit 8: Nordyke "3" on left; Obama "4" on right. Forming the top of the Obama "4"br />

Finally, as seen in Exhibit 9, the edges of the "3" would be filled in, eliminating the curves that are not seen in the Obama "4."

Exhibit 9: Nordyke "3" on left; Obama "4" on right. Eliminating curves in the Nordyke "3"

"My '4,' as seen in the Nordyke left side of Exhibit 8, is a bit larger than the "4" the forgers created in the Obama birth certificate," he admitted. "But even using MSPaint, which is not the professional quality of Adobe Photoshop that the forger used to make the number transformation, I am close to the final result, not using any special touching up."

He also noted that he made no effort to fill in the white pixels created around the Nordyke "3" in eliminating the curves.

"But it appears the Obama forger didn't do much better," he observed, noting the obvious pixel disruption surrounding the Obama "4" in the final birth certificate production.

For the final "1" in the Obama birth certificate, he contended forgers copied the first "1" in the Nordyke number sequence, modified it to create sharper edges, completing the Obama birth certificate number by dropping the last "1" into the number sequence, most likely as a "cut-and-paste JPG image."

He noted that the dropped-in cut-and-paste final "1" in the Obama number sequence rode lower on the horizontal base than the last "7" or "8" in the Nordyke twins' birth certificate numbers.

Another piece of evidence for forgery is that the last digit of the Obama birth certificate number, as seen in the top right of Exhibit 10, was added as a separate layer.

Eliminating Curves in the Nordyke "3"

Exhibit 10: Last digit of Obama birth certificate formed on separate layer in Adobe file

"The forgery should be obvious, even to the non-expert," he concluded. "Even if the modification of the '3' into the '4' is not apparent to someone not trained in digital image manipulation, the tonal difference between the dark, solid-black, bitmap-like first five digits in the Obama birth certificate number and the softer, fuzzier, and more pixelated quality of the final '1' in the sequence is apparent to even the untrained eye under modest magnification of the document."

Adobe book editor agrees

Mara Zebest, the nationally recognized computer expert who has served as contributing author and technical editor for many books on Adobe software, agrees that forgers used the Nordyke twins' document as a template.

"I believe the Nordyke image played a significant role in compiling Obama's document," she wrote in her report on the Obama birth certificate fraud, concluding that the Nordyke twins' birth certificates were "the ultimate template" for the Obama birth certificate final product.

Zebest attributed the curvature observed in the Obama birth certificate to the curvature observed in the Nordyke photostats.

"When viewing Obama's document for the first time, one of the first items that struck me as odd (especially if still applying common sense) was the curvature on the left edge of the document," she wrote. "To make matters worse, I could see evidence that the poor quality text seems to be digitally manipulated to mimic the curvature.

"For me, the Nordyke image explains the inspiration for the curvature effect (and trust me, it is just that ï¿½ an effect ï¿½ even down to the shadow."

Zebest also observed how closely the "Kapiolani Maternity & Gynecological Hospital" in the Nordyke birth certificates mirrored the same entry in Box 6e of the Obama birth certificate, as seen in Exhibits 10 and 11.

Exhibit 11: Gretchen Carter Nordyke's birth certificate. Box 6e: Name of hospital

Exhibit 12: Barack Obama's birth certificate. Box 6e: Name of hospital

Zebest was struck by the similarity of the letter groupings in both documents. She noted the closeness of the "ani" in "Kapiolani"; the closeness of the "ty" in "Maternity"; the touching "yn"; the touching "al" in "Gynecological"; and the closeness of "Ho" and "sp" in "Hospital" ï¿½ letter groupings that appear almost identical in the Nordyke document and the Obama birth certificate.

"The big tip off that the Kapiolani text was cut and pasted from another document, such as the Nordyke certificate, is the fact that the text can be lined up identically with Obama's certificate. The quality of text matches if you resize the low quality image," she observed.

"But in Obama's certificate, the text does not line up in the left margin (as it does with the Nordyke certificate), but instead is centered on Obama's certificate ï¿½ which wouldn't happen when a typist is typing the information and the carriage return goes to the left margin edge."

Her conclusion: "Analyzing the letter groupings, it looks like the forgers cut-and-pasted the hospital name from the Nordyke twins directly onto the Obama birth certificate, taking pains only to sharpen the letters to make them more legible."

On April 28, one day after the White House release of the Obama birth certificate, WND ran a story analyzing the Nordyke twins' birth certificates as a "Rosetta stone" to understanding whether the Obama birth certificate was an authentic photocopy of an original 1961 vital record or a forgery."

Now a known and proven criminal in the whitehouse, whose crimes are recognized worldwide, and the criminal congress and courts do nothing.

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears
juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

So I guess you think America should overthrow the government in Saudi Arabia, China, North Korea, Yemen, Syria and any other country whose government terrorizes it's own people? Where does the world police end and

Next time you make fun of me for making a typo I will remember this, America can't afford to be the worlds police and the war is unconstitutional. Congress has to be able to declare war. Obama is a

The American economy is going down the toilet and you think it would be smart for them to launch even more wars and bombings?
Do you support America helping a group who has ties to Al Qaida?

http://timesofpakistan.pk/editorials/2011-03-31/libyan-rebel-groups%E2%80%99-al-qaeda-links/29459/
ACCORDING to reports, the Libyan leader who is heading the rebel government titled the Emirate of Barq at Derna, has Al-Qaeda links. In an interview with the Italian newspaper Il Sole 24 Ore, Abdel-Hakim al Hasidi admitted that he had recruited "around 25" men from the Derna area in eastern Libya to fight against coalition troops in Iraq. Some of them, he said, "today are on the front lines in Adjabiya". Mr. al-Hasidi admitted that he himself had earlier fought against 'the foreign invasion' in Afghanistan alongside Osama bin Laden, before being captured in 2002 in Peshawar, in Pakista

Abdel-Hakim al-Hasidi, the Libyan rebel leader in an interview with the Italian newspaper ' Il Sole 24 Ore' given on March 26, admitted that Islamic jihadists who fought against US-led Coalition Forces in Iraq are on the frontlines of the battle against the Libyan regime of Colonel Qaddafi.

In an interview with the Italian newspaper Il Sole 24 Ore, Mr al-Hasidi admitted that he had recruited "around 25" men from the Derna area in eastern Libya to fight against coalition troops in Iraq. Some of them, he said, are "today are on the front lines in Adjabiya".

Mr al-Hasidi insisted his fighters "are patriots and good Muslims, not terrorists," but added that the "members of al-Qaeda are also good Muslims and are fighting against the invader".

He once lived under the Taliban's protection, met with Osama bin Laden and helped found a group the U.S. has listed as a terrorist organization. He died in a secondhand U.S. military uniform, ambushed by Moammar Kadafi's men as he cleared a road after an airstrike by his new NATO allies.

You are supporting helping Al Qaida take power in Libya! So are we suddenly now buddies with Al Qaida now? Are they the good guys? When are you going to admit we are being lied to?

The la times is a kook site? the telegraph is a kook site? The times of Pakistan is a kook site? I noticed how you didn't reply to any of the facts I posted, maybe you think calling me a kook will make me ignore the evidence that the Libyan rebels who you support have connections with Al Qaida.
In a few years when NATO is still in Libya you will say it was a mistake to go in. Well I am saying it is a mistake from day 1 just like I should have with Iraq. Fool me once, shame on you. Fool me twice...

Shot fired when neighbor feud escalates

July 05, 2011 1:01 PM

PINON HILLS • A Pinon Hills man is behind bars for attempted murder after allegedly shooting into his neighbor•s home following an argument, San Bernardino County Sheriff•s Department officials said.
Baron Smith, 47, became involved in an disagreement with his neighbor Sunday and it escalated, Jodi Miller, spokeswoman for the sheriff•s department, said. According to reports, the neighbors had been feuding for some time.
•This is an ongoing fight and this time it accelerated to that level,• she said.
Authorities received several reports of a man shooting toward a house in the 2500 block of Olivera Road at about 6:30 p.m., according to Miller.
When deputies arrived, they learned Smith had gone back to his home across the street from where the shooting had taken place. Officials went to the home and arrested Smith.
The Pinon Hills man was booked into Victor Valley Jail for attempted murder.
He•s scheduled to be in court Wednesday.

The unnamed individual is Frank Rossio older brother of screen writer Terry Rossio.

On 3840kHz the below between July 1 and July 11 between the hours of 9:00PM (PST) and 4:00AM (PST) all the below individuals below

KI6GPR, (Cosmo - John), of Santa Clarita, CALIF
NO6L , Charles (Chuck) G Ruff of Tehachapi, CALIF
KI6DKV, Noel W Burman of North Hollywood,CALIF
KK6FR, Frank Rossio of 2540 Olivera, Phelan, CALIF have stated that Frank Rossio (kk6fr) will own Baron Smiths property, and all have used a gang like character assassination against Smith.

There is some collusion with the individuals above and Frank Rossio to illegally obtain Smiths property.
The individuals above should be investigated.

ALSO consider point one - Rossio owns the defunct FG Bestcommunications, a company that entitles him to obtain dangerous chemicals and may be fraudulently using his business license to claim tax exemptions.

In August of 2010 AD8Q Kevin Caprio, drove to Phelan and purchased some equipment from kk6fr then returned back to Arizona dropped dead shorty thereafter after complaining of massive headaches.

point two - ke6ynh, Tom from San Diego got into a big argument with kk6fr and no6l about November of 2010 on 3840kHz. Both Frank Rossio and Ruff threatened to drive down and kill Tom, well in December 2010, passed on from mysterious causes. Ironically when the two silent keys died, Frank exhibited no apathy and even praised their deaths. In regards to Smiths arrest he bragged about it and mentioned "his (Smiths) property is as good as gold his (franks)."
Something is going on! Frank Rossio and his clan of cohorts needs to be investigated.
KK6FR is nothing but a liar, braggart, punk, who threatens people and exhibits a schizoid personality, one trait is his lying and contorting stories, no different than a con man!

DO NOT BELIEVE EVERYTHING FRANK ROSSIO SAYS IT'S A RUSE.
IF YOU ARE A HAM YOU'D BE ADVISED TO AVOID ANY QSO WITH THE ABOVE INDIVIDUALS.

I am a centrist or old school liberal and, yes, I do mind and feel most of them should come home. We have 370,000 troops spread around the world. We need to stop buying our friends and let some of those other countries put more money in their defense budgets.

Take another look, these wars are not about protecting Americans. The wars are simply a larger game set of the board and pieces of a chess set, meant to amuse the rich-powerful-elite shadow government.

The monies are NOT to buy friends, they are simply a con game to steal American dollars and transfer them to the pockets of the same.

The movie "The Matrix" (actually a trilogy) demonstrates the principle(s.) You are simply still stuck on level one ...

Since Aoki did NOT publish his schedule in full text, I did not use it to produce my schedules as of march 2011.

I still use Eibi to make an hourly table per station / language etc.

This is one of the original women thinking the "obama money" was going to save here, video:

http://pajamasmedia.com/tatler/2011/07/14/obamas-america-in-two-videos/

The second video, a bit down the page, shows the foot race for housing vouchers ... I would call it, "The homeless race for a roof over their heads!"

If you do some research, on the net, there are going to be 3,800 such vouchers issued over the next FEW YEARS ... already there is 5,000 signed up (or more) and the list is expected to grow to about 15,000.

That is 15,000 people to fight over the 3,800, nice. The view from my "windows on America" is a view of a 3rd world country, sliding downhill ...

And, another "obama money woman" is heard in this glen beck video:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pIkksi344cM

Another video of people after "obama stimulus money.":
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cV2ngvYI_ZU&feature=related

And, I sit here wondering, "Just how did all that work out for them?
And, I wonder if those housing vouchers are going to work as well?"

ROFLOL ... you just gotta love it -- AMERICA IN SHAMBLES.

And, I wonder, further, "Is this like it was when the berlin wall fell, or russia collapsed ..." ... and, I think, probably, but the fall here is just beginning ...

JS

Had a nice storm, actually two of 'em blow through here Monday morning.

Winds between 90-122 mph. Was an interesting time.

Just got my power back on here about a half hour ago.

No, to much other stuff to get done.

Government is full of sick faggot, lesbians, child molesters. They got tired of being locked up for their perversions and having it explained to them that normal people didn't appreciate their illness ...

So, they organized, the homosexual and pervert groups, then ran and took over government ... we really need to all get aware on this and start removing these sickos. But, the criminals come first, like obama, and the criminal-sicko-perverts first of any!

A good house cleaning has been in order for at least two decades and four can be argued easily ...

What a complete idiot, if that isn't just bizarre and ignorant, someone explain a sensible point he is attempting to make.

You just don't leave radios antennas hooked up to high voltage/current sources ... wire and fuse is something a moron would come up with.

Somewhere I read that the Real {Statistical} Danger comes from the 1/4th Mile of Electrical Power Grid around your Home/Building and not so much from your own the Antenna Wire and Ground System. More Equipment is Damaged due to AC Power Line Surges; then EMF/ESD via the Antenna Wires. -?-now-is-that-true-?-

Three Steps To A Safe Radio Shack Before & During a Lighting Storm :
http://groups.google.com/group/shortwave-listener-qsl-reports/msg/bfc0737fb384a181

1 Job = Un-Plug the Radios & Equipment
from the AC Mains -first-

2 Job = Disconnect the Antenna Wire(s)

3 Job = Keep Everything in the Radio
Shack Well Grounded.

I'm afraid , this is absolutely true . And very real . The STD rates in DC are the highest in the nation . That place has become the vice capital , probably worse than Thailand (in the last few years) !
I'm not so sure whether BHO fits in any of the above mentioned categories , though very little is known about his preferences at the present . But then again-- who the hell knows . . .

I don't think any war since 911 was about protecting the American people or had anything to do with 911. The Taliban offered to hand over Binladen http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2001/oct/14/afghanistan.terrorism5,
http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2001/oct/17/afghanistan.terrorism11, http://www.independent.co.uk/news/world/asia/bush-rejects-taliban-offer-to-surrender-bin-laden-631436.html, http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Jv5AKw6gwXg

And the US wanted to invade Afghanistan before 911
http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/south_asia/1550366.stm
http://www.wsws.org/articles/2001/nov2001/afgh-n20.shtml

So 911 is being used as an excuse for everything. Could it be for world government? Maybe, I know the reasons we are being told is a pack of lies.

It's just the state of the world that has gotten me asking questions. It just seems crazy. But conspiracy theories are equally as crazy and confusing. One group says it's the moonies, another says its the Zionists, another says it's the Jews, another says the Jesuites, another says the reptilians, another says the Bilderberg group...well which group is it?

'CASUALTIES are rising in Libyaï¿½s opposition-held eastern cities as embattled President Muammar Gaddafi pounded Ras Lanuf with air strikes and ground forces in Bin Jawad.

As the death toll rises, opposition forces renewed an urgent plea for a no-fly zone over Libya to save lives.

ï¿½Gaddafiï¿½s superiority is in the air. And with that, you have the upper hand overall. Whoever rules the skies, rules the ground,ï¿½ said Colonel Mohamed Qarbuly.

ï¿½We call for the West to have a no-fly zone to save lives.ï¿½ '

You don't know what my attitude to civilians dying in war is. I have never told you.

What I have told you is that in most cases it is not illegal.

People die in wars. Always have. Always will.

And now you see why I am against wars. Also many wars have been based on a pack of lies and propaganda. If the public knew the real reasons for them no one would fight in them.

Well I guess I can't point to a law where it says it is illegal for a civilian to die in a war so morally wrong. Of course what tyrants like Saddam and Gaddafi do to their own people is wrong but they are far worse people then them out there.

You got the northern storm that I didn't. But that second one blew through my yard at about 8:05 am CDT. Went from nearly a clear blue sky to horizontal rain in about 7 minutes, with 75+mph winds.
And then it was over in less than 10 minutes. There are still some areas of Lake County without power. Waukegan took the worst of it, before the storm took out across the Lake.

That 90 miles was crossed in less than 45 minutes, according to reports I heard that day. And that red hook echo on the radar was the definitive evidence of a tornadic storm. We had reports in my neighborhood of a funnel, but no touch down. And WBBM reported that a funnel was seem crossing the airspace over the lake.

The storm took down trees three feet in diameter in my neighborhood. Two of them are still down across powerlines, and some roads are still closed.

Again, as so many times in the past, my house was spared any damage. Though I did have a few branches from other properties to clean up in the yard. Any serious damage where you are?

Lots of trees down in the downtown area. Had a report of a waterspout out on Lake Macatawa just to the north of me, though I'm not sure which storm it was with.

Had severe damage to the 138 kv line running near the power plant, and still have some streets closed downtown as of last evening.

I was one of the "isolated outages" out here, as I had the drop broken along with the phone line from the pole to the house.

We've got extra repair crews here from various areas including Indiana. The crew that repaired my line was from Hillsdale, MI.

It is his job, he is here to take care of the children and mentally unfit. He knows it is a tough job, but he just mans up, puts on his superman cape, leaves the telephone booth, and does it ... for American,

Nothing wrong with being "against wars". Most people are. Even those that have to fight them.

Being "against wars" doesn't mean you can go around accusing people of war crimes, though. Not without know what is and isn't a war crime.

>Also many wars have been based on a pack of lies and propaganda.

Ok. So?

>If the public knew the real reasons for them no one would fight in them.

Bullshit. Pure utopian nonsense.

Yeah, they said that there were 900 work crews effecting repairs in Northern Illinois. I tend to doubt that figure. Although, by the time I was finally restored, they were down to wire-by-wire repairs in Lake County.

The positive spin on this was that with so much power and digital service out, I did get some quiet SWL in after the storms had passed.

The K3 has a gas pellet in the front end. I also have a Delta A/B switch with an identical surge protector in line, and the GAP Titan DX vertical is going through a Diamond protector at the wall. I forgot how many 8' rods I have, but it's at least 4 outside the shack, within a quarter wave of each other. The R75 is totally floating on the 30 meter horizontal loop. I just unplug it at the wall.

I have a previous version that sells for about half that on Amazon. I had to use gaff tape and physical violence to modify it. The sound is quite pleasant in a normal room.

Aren't whole house surge protectors incorporated into all new homes?

If you haven't installed a whole house surge protector, and your home lacks one, perhaps one should be installed?

I have noticed that a lot of new powerstrips/etc. seem to lack the surge protectors ... the more in use, the more "clamping" on any spikes/transients leaving the power plant supplying you ...

I just pulled all the outlets in my home and placed protectors on them all, and a very large unit protects the whole house. Then, there are those powerstrips I have, so pretty "clamped down" here.

Don't confuse monies (the funds in question) with the moonies (your religion.)

It depends what group, and what their charter, goals, endeavors are directed to and towards ... sure looks to me like the bilderbergers are the ones to watch when criminally-treasonous public servants come to question ...

I've already said that anyone who has smelled a battlefield the next day wants to fight in them either.......

Perhaps we should take an old scenario from Allan Sherman and have those who declare the war fight it. We could rent space from Greenland or Siberia and give those folks whatever weapons they want and can carry.
When only one is left, we can declare the war over and that his side won.

The Latin American SW Logs page has been updated as of 15 July:

http://www.mcdxt.it/LASWLOGS.html

dxAce
Michigan
USA

Drake R7, R8, R8A and R8B
70' and 200' wires
GE SR I (2) and II

239 countries heard and 225 QSL'd (veried, for those in Glendale) using the NASWA Country List.

And, as always, don't let your children attend the Sullivan College of Technology & Design (Backwater U.).

They've hired at least one dufus who once claimed to have a PhD and lied about being arrested, and who knows, there may be more dufi there.

If they were forced to fight in their own wars we would have world peace in no time. Instead they expect young men and women to die for their political wars.

Why?

Because he is NOT the president of the United States of American, and never has been:

J R, you will never notice a bit of difference, even with a freq counter which is accurate to a gnats arse.

It will still be your normal voltage, it will still be your 60 Hz.

However, it WILL NOT, or MAY NOT be in phase with other power stations on the grid/systems.

You would need a phase meter and a connection to the other power station/source you wished to make comparison to ... really not practical for most ...

So most wars aren't even to defend America which means civilians have to die

Time to educate you.

The Gulf Of Tonkin incident is a lie.
They were no weapons of mass destruction when Bush invaded Iraq. The UN weapons inspectors said so and it has come out that the person who gave the intelligence was lying.
America was warned by Germany it would sink the Lusitania http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/File:Lusitania_warning.jpg which gave rise to anti German sentiment (ok it wasn't the only reason America entered WW1) Japan was provoked to make the first strike against America so America had a reason to enter WW2.
During the 90's, America's sanctions against Iraq were responsible for a lot of dead children and the US Ambassador to Iraq said America had no opinion if Iraq invaded Kuwait.

It is not "Utopian bullshit" they are countries that really hate America and ones we should worry about like North Korea. But it is truth. Wars are based on lies.

If they were forced to fight in their own wars we would have world peace in no time. Instead they expect young men and women to die for their political wars.

I like my solution to the problem. You take all the parties that wish to wage a war, drop them on an uncharted island with no outside communications and no watercraft, and allow them to fight it out amongst themselves. Once everyone else is dead, and there is a clear winner; shoot him.

ARLP028 Propagation de K7RA

Average daily sunspot numbers this week were up 57 percent over the previous seven days, rising from 41.6 to 65.6. Average daily solar flux rose just 3 points to 89.1.

There seem to be plenty of sunspots of late, but none have been large, and so the sunspot number and solar flux are not as high as in some previous months.

A new sunspot appeared on July 7, then three the next day on July 8, then a new one each day on July 9, 10 and 11, and two more on July 13 and another two on July 14. A coronal mass ejection on July 9 gave us some geomagnetic activity a couple of days later.

The current forecast shows the planetary A index on July 15-24 at 5, 5, 5, 8, 8, 12, 12, 8, 8 and 5. Solar flux is predicted at 94 on July 15-17, 92 on July 18-19, 90 on July 20-21, then 94, 90, 89, 87, 87, 89 and 88 on July 22-28.

Geophysical Institute Prague says look for quiet to unsettled geomagnetic conditions on July 15, quiet July 16-17, unsettled July 18, unsettled to active July 19, unsettled July 20 and quiet to unsettled July 21.

Jeff Hartley, N8II of Shepherdstown, West Virginia sent in a report on recent 6 meter activity. He wrote, "The recent somewhat lower solar flux is noticeable on the bands, late night openings to EU on 15 are curtailed and 17 meters is slow to open to anywhere in our morning".

"I got up late today, July 8 to find a very good 6 meter opening to Europe. The first station heard was DK1DAX who rapidly faded down followed by EA7KW (who is always there when the band is open), then G8BCG who I managed to work. Then the Mediterranean area really started to come thru well around 1435z. IS0GQX, F5PAU, CT1DVV, CT1EWX, EA7RM, another F5, and ZB2FK (Gibraltar) was worked for a new country."

"On Sunday July 3 I finally logged PJ6D around 2300z after hearing them on FD for quite a stretch, but my weak signal could not be heard there".

"Around June 29, SM5EDX was the only signal heard on 6 meters at 2115z besides a few direct signals on the East Coast calling him. There have been quite a few 6 meter European openings into W1, W2, southern W4 and the Midwest that did not extend into my area".

Thanks, Jeff!

Robert Elek, W3HKK of Johnstown, Ohio writes "Thursday July 7 around 2300z saw a nice 6 meter opening to Portugal with three strong (57 to 59) signals arriving in central Ohio from CT1's HZE/HZJ/FFU. Signals were in and out for several hours centered on 2300z. Nice going guys! Have a glass of Porto on me!"

"Then on Friday morning, July 8, it hit the fan in central Ohio! I worked CT1FFU and HZE again, stronger than the night before, and then witnessed nearly all of western Europe coming thru, one by one, building up out of the noise to around 55/559 and sometimes as in the case of IS0GQX up to 59. It seemed GQX was in there from around 1300z until the band quieted down around 1800z. Kudos for an amazing signal! Meanwhile, I had fun working F8DBF, ON5HJS, 9H1BT, EA7KW, all new countries for me, and a couple of Canadian Maritimers. But alas, the hoped for evening opening didn't materialize in central Ohio, although I saw the Euro's were still on but working 6's and 7's and 5's".

"Imagine all this DX with 100 watts to a 5 element Yagi towering TEN FEET above the rear patio, 'equipped' with an Armstrong rotator! Six is indeed The Magic Band. This was the most widespread DX opening I have seen in my two years on the band. I heard stations from England, Italy, and Russia as well. Very cool opening!"

Thanks, Robert. As the kids say, "Awesome!"

We get a lot of email about solar activity, including some from non-hams curious about something they read in the news. Some people mention that in the same week they see articles claiming we're in for some sort of dangerous solar maximum, but then they read about a dearth of sunspots. I ran across this at a NASA site, which reminds me of some of the questions I get:
http://astrobiology.nasa.gov/ask-an-astrobiologist/question/?id=16490.

Another interesting piece is this one about a big solar event 11 years ago:
http://www.space.com/12278-bastille-day-solar-storm-anatomy.html.

Pat Moore, AL7L of Juneau, Alaska pointed out that perhaps the use of the word "millennia" in the last bulletin was unintended, as "millennia" is plural, while "millennium" is singular.

Dick Bingham, W7WKR, who used to live in my Seattle neighborhood now lives way off the grid at Stehekin, Washington, reachable only by boat or a very rugged mountain trail. Check out his interesting address in the lookup feature at http://www.arrl.org/ or at QRZ.com. Dick sent an article and video from NASA about a dark solar explosion that continues to baffle and fascinate over a month after the event. See and read about it at http://science.nasa.gov/science-news/science-at-nasa/2011/11jul_darkfireworks/.

Mike Schaffer, KA3JAW loves to DX TV and FM broadcasts in Tampa, Florida, and reports some intense sporadic E propagation on July 11-12. He writes, "On Monday, July 11 at 2310 UTC I was getting traces of B/W video with occasional audio from a unidentified Canadian TV-6 broadcaster via Sporadic-E that continued up until 0235 UTC (9:35 pm EDT)".

"I do not recall ever having Es all the way up on channel 6 (83.25 MHz video/87.75 MHz audio) this late in the evening from Canada".

"The next day, during the 1730 UTC time I heard one unidentified Cuban TV-6 audio on 87.7 on the car radio. Five minutes later I tuned up to 107.7 with a reception of an unidentified Mexican station. Both stations had fluctuating signal strengths from moderate to strong with a slow rate of fading".

"While remaining on 107.7 for the next hour I heard an advertisement for the Alpena.com website for about one minute, then fading away. Twenty-minutes later the signal came in with a moderate signal strength at the best possible time giving its identification spot, '107-7 The Bay'".

"The reception distance was 1,191 air miles from Alpena, Michigan to Tampa, Florida. That would place the Es plasma cloud overhead of Rogersville, Tennessee".

Mike got a confirmation from the manager of the broadcast station that indeed he had received WHSB on 107.7 MHz. Mike mentioned that he received the signal using the back-side of a cross-phased multi-element antenna.

Joe Miller, KJ8O of Troy, Michigan writes about some curious propagation he experienced. "For the past five years, I have worked the IARU Championship and/or Field Day, and I have worked stations on 20 meters that are in the 200-300 mile range as opposed to the usual 600-700 mile or further first skip. I have noticed this short propagation only occurs in late June and early July. The big surprise for me this year was working AC8G in Dayton OH at 1515z on Saturday, July 7 on the 15 meter band at a distance of 212 miles. I contacted him and he stated that he was using a tower of about 62 feet and a four element Yagi pointed towards Europe and running about 900 watts. On my end, I have a 5BTV and was running 100 watts. His was a good solid signal, not the kind usually heard by backscatter". Joe wonders what was happening to enable this propagation?

We ran this by Carl Luetzelschwab, K9LA, who wrote "The time period suggests sporadic E".

"We normally think of sporadic E on 6 meters and even on 10 meters. We usually don't think of sporadic E extending down to the lower frequencies. But if the electron density is high enough to refract 6 meters, then it's high enough to refract lower frequencies like 15 meters and 20 meters".

"The limiting factor determining the effect of sporadic E on these lower frequencies is the thickness and extent of the sporadic E cloud. It has to be thick enough and wide enough (at least several wavelengths) to allow a gradual bending (refraction) to occur. More than likely the thickness is the true critical parameter. Perhaps the thickness and extent was sufficient to allow short skip on 15 meters on your path. And with enough electrons to refract 50 MHz (I saw many 6 meter spots over the weekend), it's also possible that reflection could have been involved on 15 meters, which says the cloud would not have to be as thick nor as wide".

Carl looked at the Millstone Hill (Massachusetts) ionogram for July 7 at 1515 UTC. "Of course it's not near Joe's path, but it's the closest we have! Note that sporadic E was occurring, and the ordinary wave sporadic E critical frequency was reported as 4.28 MHz and the extraordinary wave sporadic E critical frequency (the green echoes at the same virtual height) was up to 5 MHz. These critical frequencies couldn't support high-angle 15 meter propagation, but we just don't know the magnitude and extent of sporadic E on Joe's specific path. All we can say is sporadic E was occurring in Massachusetts, and 6 meter spots suggest it was also occurring elsewhere".

"Other possibilities are an F region anomaly, but not too likely as the summer months are generally quiet and have the lowest F region electron densities (for what it's worth, the sparse Millstone Hill data says high-angle F region propagation over your path couldn't be supported, either). As for a geomagnetic disturbance as suggested by your friend, I see that the A and K indices were not elevated on July 7, so that would be tough to couple to your QSO. Another possibility could be extremely long ground wave (I can easily work Toledo and Dayton on 15 meters from Ft Wayne) but the signals would be weak. A last possibility would be some kind of scatter mode, but again with weak signals".

Thanks, Carl. Great analysis!

When you have law and rules for yourself, and a society, to live under, you recognize them, immediately!

Why, they are wholesome and support human life, fairness and a system to have rational actions, goals and a way of life.

Funny, but the Ten Commandments sums this all up, and quite simply.
Indeed, when you find a rational and fair law, it will in agreement with those commandments ... mans laws are simply created to give special favors, considerations and benefits to some select few or group ...

You missed my point entirely (which is not unusual).

What is utopian bullshit is that no one would fight. People fight because they have to. People fight because they see injustice and want to stop it. People fight to change their circumstances. People fight because they are scared. People fight because they are greedy.

Your utopian vision that "if we all knew the truth, no one would die" is bullshit. People aren't that nice.

Yeah that was one of the beginnings of an original American Design and Build in the USA; and by the

I have one or two old Hitachi radios.Hitachi makes/made Good Radios.Various pocket size radios I used to sometimes tote when I was in the Army, Motorola, Hitachi, Sony, G.E. ectera.In Vietnam ergo the tremendous humidity over there, I used to wrap some plastic around my radios.They didn't call me Radio Ryan for nuttin.Mostly, in Vietnam, I listened to Vietnamese music stations.I never have cared much for that rock and roll sheet.

I have a Realistic TRF-10 from 1965, from before Radio Shack had been acquired by Tandy and before it was associated with Allied Radio. The catalog number was 12-614, and it was about the size of a Sony 7600.
As implied by the nomenclature, it has a turned RF stage ahead of the converter. I remember using it to get daylight BCB reception of a station about 400 miles away (granted, it ws 500kW and across salt walter).

Actually- J&R claims to provide free 2 hour parking to its customers if one spends $200 . Taxis are ve-r-r-ry expensive now, haven't bothered using them in years . It is much easier to drive your own vehicle , if it is possible ( actually it has become Mission: Impossible in Manhattan in the last 10 years or so ) ...

Yes, my wife has a .32 beretta she carries on her, or in her purse (most of the time on her, due to purse snatching gone wild here), I spent hours and hours teaching her to properly clear a target before I allowed her to use her carry permit ... it would be a shame to have given the weapon to the person who kills me ... yanno'?

We trained with paint ball guns, and she did get some paint on me, till she learned ... :-(

Oh I get it now (I think) the rebels in Libya for example want to be free from that dictator so they fight. Even if they were no wars and we didn't kill each other they would still be injustices and evil dictatorships and theocracies oppressing people. I guess you're right. But why can't all human beings have the same rights and be free to practice their religion or say what they want and to get and education or drive? I guess people are just arseholes to each other.

Ok good point, Gaddafi seems just as brutal in his treatment of his own people as people in these dictatorships. It's just do we really have the money and resources to help all these people if they ask us to? I suppose if we listened to people like me Hitler would have taken over Europe by now and all the Jews would be killed but war just seems pointless.

Where in the 10 commandments does it say "Thou shalt not meet in private and discuss world events from 20 different perspectives"?
I watch Jesse Ventura but that doesn't seem very sinister.

Peoples desire to have what other people have is the cause of much strife and conflict.

Our Masonic Constitution
By J B Campbell

~ Foreword ~

Quite a bit of discernment is needed here to understand this Article. I wonder how many of our readers will have the ability to see through it. If you need help, Click Here. Have fun! Associate Editor.

The US Constitution was a betrayal of the Declaration of Independence. Real patriots such as Patrick Henry, George Mason and a few others saw it as a blueprint for empire and fought it. The Bill of Rights was added at their insistence as a defense against the Constitution! Big Banker whores such as Hamilton and the Federalists didn't want any enumerated rights - they said "You must trust us and our promises to observe your rights." Henry said, "Not good enough - we need guarantees."

In 1976, the Sovereign Grand Commander of the 33rd Degree of Scottish Rite Freemasonry, Henry C. Clausen, published a little book called Masons Who Helped Shape Our Nation. On page 82, he writes: "Though free, we were not yet united [1783]. The loose Articles of Confederation did not provide a strong national government, common currency or consistent judicial system. Men of vision realized that another step must be taken if the weak Confederation of American States was to become a strong, unified nation.

Again Freemasonry set the pattern in ideology and form. Since the Masonic federal system of organization was the only pattern for effective organization operating in each of the original Thirteen Colonies, it was natural that patriotic Brethren should turn to the organizational base of the Craft for a model. Regardless of the other forces that affected the formation of the Constitution during the Constitutional Convention in 1787, the fact remains that the federalism created is identical to the federalism of the Grand Lodge system of Masonic government created in Anderson's Constitutions of 1723."

Clausen, an attorney, is naturally proud of the Constitution's Supreme Court, with Brother John Marshall the most famous and significant Chief Justice and the man who revealed the Masons' contempt for us all in his enunciation of "judicial review," which meant simply that the Supreme Court was the true power. Where is the check and balance on the Supreme Court?

Masons crave power and that's what they got with their seven Articles. They fought the Ten Articles of Amendment (the Bill of Rights) right up till December, 1791. They nullified their own Constitution in 1913 with the 17th Amendment. This provided for the direct election of Senators. The Constitution was a contract between the States and the People, the former represented by Senators appointed by State legislatures and the latter by Representatives elected popularly. When Senators became elected popularly, too, the States were no longer represented and the Constitution was rendered null and void. We have been under a sham government ever since.

The Constitution is a fraud on the people and should be abandoned. It has not protected us from civil or foreign wars, from inflation and federal corruption. It is in fact the engine of all these crimes, authorizing such racketeering as the private Federal Reserve Corporation and its collection agency, the IRS. The Bill of Rights was our great champion for many years but it, too, has collapsed because it is in conflict with the first Seven Articles of the US Constitution. The Supreme Court protects the Constitution but it does not protect the Bill of Rights.

The First Amendment has become a license for our natural enemies to corrupt our children and ourselves with the most vile pornography, which has nothing to do with the right to criticize the government.

The Second Amendment has just been declared null and void with a recent USSC decision, which paves the way for confiscation and martial law.

The Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Amendments have been ripped up by the Patriot Act and the US Army's atrocities at Camp X-ray and other places.

The Seventh Amendment supposedly guarantees a jury for virtually any dispute over twenty dollars. Try bringing that up with a judge in traffic court these days.

The Eighth Amendment prohibits excessive bail and cruel and unusual punishment. Has the Supreme Court or any federal court protected us against "jeopardy assessments and seizures," which steal all our money before trial so we can't even hire an attorney? What does the Supreme Court say about having foreign police torture us? It says that it's okay.

The Ninth and Tenth Amendments are not even recognized by the federal judges, who are mostly Freemasons.

Everything in the Bill of Rights was pretty much nullified by the Fourteenth Amendment, rammed through in the dictatorial aftermath of the Civil War, when the Southern States had no true legislatures. The Fourteenth Amendment made us all slaves and said that the public debt shall not be questioned!

We have been in the malevolent, deceptive hands of Freemasons from the very beginning of this country. They've had us waving their flag and praising their fraudulent Constitution all these bloody years while they steadily chipped away at the Bill of Rights so that today it is virtually non-existent.

The Declaration of Independence - the truly great instrument of human liberty - was rendered meaningless by the Masonic Federalists who provided for no such liberation in the Constitution, which was itself a dirty trick crafted in secrecy by delegates who met to modify the existing Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union Between the States. As mentioned previously, the Articles gave no power to the central government, which the Masons craved. It purposely kept the central government weak.

The Freemasons wanted a central bank, which must have a central government to enforce it. Henry Clausen, the head of Freemasonry in the '60s and '70s, said this in his book, Masons Who Helped Shape Our Nation (pp 14-16):

"The nation could either unify as one people or disintegrate into a loose federation of States. It was a critical question, the determination of which would set the pattern for the rest of our history. Once more, Freemasons were in pivotal positions working for a strong, united America.

"Second only to Washington and Franklin in this movement were Robert Morris and Alexander Hamilton. Often called 'The Banker of the Revolution,' Brother Morris, like Hamilton, realized that a national fiscal and economic system was necessary to hold the States together. First steps were made toward this when Morris, who had received a Masonic apron from Washington himself in 1778, was named Superintendent of Finance in 1781 and when the Bank of North America was opened in 1782. [sic] Original stockholders were Franklin, Jefferson, Hamilton, Monroe and Jay. The Bank clothed Washington's army and supplied enough confidence in the new Nation to win America international recognition. Hamilton - aide-de-camp to Washington in the Revolution, member of the Continental Congress, and first US Secretary of the Treasury - supported Morris, proposed extending the Bank into The First Bank of the United States and, with Washington's strong support, succeeded in this endeavor to establish America on a sound monetary basis.

"Without the combined financial genius of Brothers Morris and Hamilton, the delegates to the Constitutional Convention in 1787 may not have had the needed confidence to envision the creation of one binding Constitution to govern all the States. On this basis, however, Franklin could argue persuasively the combined political, military, economic and social benefits that the Constitution assured. Brother Robert Morris nominated [Brother] Washington who was unanimously elected president of the Convention. Thus he gave his tremendous prestige to the constitutional proposal.

"The significance of Freemasonry's influence on the Constitution cannot be overstated. Freemasons conceived, argued and ratified the immortal document and, ever since that historic Convention in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, Freemasons have given support to its preservation."

And now we can understand why. Hamilton's father's name was Levy, by the way. The central bank was the entire purpose of the Revolution from the Masons' position. It would not become the true dictatorial power with total control of interest and credit until 1913 because of intelligent resistance based on an understanding of money and credit by our true patriots up until that significant year.

Abraham Lincoln demonstrated that the Declaration of Independence was meaningless by waging bloody war on those who took the Declaration seriously. What the Confederates did was fully authorized by the Declaration and their government was based on the original Articles of Confederation. All independence movements here and overseas are prohibited by the US government. The Declaration of Independence is considered by our government as a terrorist creed. Anyone who would invoke it is crushed, here and abroad.

Or else, due to your fondness for crack, you are down to only owning some tape and being in a mind towards physical violence, being two of your only remaining possessions (well, that state of mind can be debated -- as still being owned by you), and you just gotta work with what you have.

Actually, this time, you actually have a foot in reality, from what I have seen, a first!

That is a human trait, but you most often see it in the homeless, drug addicts, alcoholics, criminals, people of limited mental abilities, sociopathic individuals/groups/etc.

Normal human beings tend to out grow these baser primal emotions which come from a dark place where survival depended upon using these just to stay alive. However, it is easy to take control of a person, group, or even a number as large as a nation but encouraging these traits in the given population, as we are seeing now. Learned men of dark goals, behaviors and with self-centered plans can use these to extract wealth from its'/their victims. You simply keep the victim(s) in question in a state of fighting amongst themselves, cause poverty, substance abuse, fear, etc., while they are all busy sweating the small stuff, you grab the important stuff and abscond though a window with what really matters.

Hopefully, enough will wake up to these plans, see they are being used and get back to reality.

Otherwise, we are going to have what you describe, attempting to grab another poor persons pot, even though you have a similar pot yourself
... sad, so very, very sad ...

And, he may have made a grave mistake, he has went and armed the general population with fully automatic weapons, the same weapons troops have used, and are still using.

Worse, they seem to be supporting him and fighting the same people who gaddaffi has "victimized."

Indeed, from alternate news resources, Americans have went to libya and talked to these people, Alex has even had one or two on as quests, and got these people saying they are just waiting for invading forces, such as the USA or NATO to come, they have a greeting arranged for us.

While I don't know enough to make absolute statements, there is something real wrong with what is going on in libya. But, if I were a Libyan citizen, I would do the best I could to keep our corporate influences and resource grabbing criminals out of their country. Least

Thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not kill, thou shalt honor thy father and mother (which should have taught you better), thou shalt not covet your neighbors wife, etc.

If you follow the basic rules, there is no reason to be in other countries stealing their resources, giving criminal banksters the citizens wealth (or, allowing them to steal it), etc.

Pretty basic stuff really ... all those conspiracy plans (or, as you call them -- different perspectives) become criminal offenses against populations ...

Having an acquaintance who works in the field of "remote billing" and implements and creates software which implements the recording and billing, he says the real problem is that for years, or even decades, some old meters on homes and business have been "tampered with."

That people have been getting/using much more power than these compromised meters are recording. And that, these new meters raise the difficult of being able to do this by magnitudes (I don't know, I have just walked back behind my house and looked at the meter, and attempted to "see" the "data signal" on my powerline with an isolated oscilloscope.)

With his education level, back ground in the industry of IT/computing-equipment/hardware/software, I tend to take his word for it. Although he is paid well, he gets no immediate personal gain from assisting the power companies in scams, that I know of ...

I simply don't find strong evidence of the meters accuracy being in question ...

There are no specifications to compare. This radio has an RF amp, but it is broadband and probably hurts as much as it helps.

I would not encourage the use, or even trusting in, a stun gun. If the situation warrants the use of a stun gun, it warrants the use of a more effective weapon, and a greater guarantee of effectively protecting your person, or another person ... from great bodily harm and/or death.

Although persons hyped up on drugs can be very, very scary, the couple of times I have been forced to deal with them, a simple broom handle, or object picked at random has sufficed ... but, if all you have are your fists, and they ain't workin', time to drag out some heavy artillery.

And, of course, there are situations where you may wish to go to the heavy artillery straight off. A suitable example might be a 110 lb woman forced to protect herself from a 200 lb. perp ... alone, a dark night, no one to call for assistance, etc. If you are a criminal, you never know, you just never know ...

to modify the on/off switch arrangement. The original configuration required an awkward hand positioning. I broke it into 3 pieces and created a guiding mechanism. The switch glides as if through golden butter, now.

The chrome ring on top was binding and difficult to turn the approximately 3 degrees required to power up the device. I removed most of the ring and made a guide out of tape to hold the remaining piece in the switch proper. Much easier than removing a battery to turn it on and off. This and an iPod Touch is my mobile entertainment system for traveling.

You remind me of a wino I once knew, seemed to be able to function on some level, with public assistance.

A bottle of wine helped him with his pain and suffering, indeed, any boozed seemed to suffice -- he thought self medicating was the way to go, rather than to see a doctor and get proper meds ...

Of course, there are side effects also, wine ended up killing him. And, every marijuana user I have known seems to be able to forget where they last laid down their roach clip. Long term use seems to feminize the men too, even to the point of developing enlarged breasts -- but, hey, that is all OK -- if you like that sort of thing.

Hmmm, still, I think I would prefer a "Stun-baseball-bat", no moving parts, lifetime guarantee (aluminum ones painted black are best), you can control the damage with the force applied -- anything from a simple senseless causing stun to a skull shattering brain killer (wrap it with an innertube if you are afraid you'll panic and kill the dude on the first blow) ...

I believe it has been Good Housekeeping approved too.

Liberty Net: July 9, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/07/liberty-net-july-9-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE LIBERTY NET is a profoundly optimistic intellectual phenomenon. It represents true free speech, the best part of the spirit of amateur radio, and ï¿½social networkingï¿½ that preceded the invention of that phrase ï¿½ and social networking can bring down oligarchs, and erase bad laws and bad government, in an historical blink of an eye. Check in this week and share your uncensored thoughts!

Hereï¿½s a brief selection of some of the topics debated this time on amateur radioï¿½s historic Liberty Net:

ï¿½ As Americaï¿½s bankruptcy looms, why are the criminals in Washington talking about cutting pensions and necessary services by billions, but are not discussing cutting foreign aid by so much as a dime? (13 minutes)

ï¿½ When so-called conservatives pitched a fit over Obamaï¿½s signing of the renewed ï¿½USA Patriot Actï¿½ with an auto-pen ï¿½ but made no objection to the Act itself ï¿½ it was a clear sign that conservatism is dead, dead, dead. (24 minutes)

ï¿½ Ron Paul has recently issued a proposal to simply and legally cancel all the ruinous debt created by the bankers and their creature, the Federal Reserve. (36 minutes)

ï¿½ Considering all the gigantic law libraries in this sad country, each with huge rooms, crowded with shelves and with the shelves stuffed full of books, each of which contains hundreds or thousands of pages of tiny type, I ask you: Is it possible in one hundred lifetimes to even read all of the laws we are supposed to obey? (1 hour 30 minutes)

ï¿½ Anyone want to bet that even one dollar will be cut from the Washington regimeï¿½s bloated military budget? Or that, if a cut is seriously proposed, a ï¿½terrorist incidentï¿½ wonï¿½t suddenly arise to frighten the boobs into nixing the proposal? (1 hour 50 minutes)

ï¿½ The last US space shuttle has just been launched. Third World countries donï¿½t have space programs. (1 hour 54 minutes)

ï¿½ Reclassifying troops as ï¿½support personnelï¿½ and hiring mercenary killers does not constitute a withdrawal. (1 hour 59 minutes)

ï¿½ When you have an entire economy based on promises to pay, undergirded only by ever-deeper layers of such promises, what happens when those promises cannot possibly be fulfilled? (2 hours 4 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net right now on your computer here at http://3950.net/ ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And N2SAG operates a live feed and chat during Net times that lets you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Join in or listen to the most exciting net on the amateur bands every Saturday night starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Our thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in keeping this very important part of the amateur radio service alive since 1974!

There are no specifications to compare. This radio has an RF amp, but it is broadband and probably hurts as much as it helps.

No, it's definitely not broadband. It's a Tuned RF design, and very sensitive and selective. The only big difference between it and the Superadio 1 is that this radio has discrete components (and of course no FM). GE went whole hog on this one. Read the story and the interview when you have time.

My G.E.P780-E radio.What likely is the reason it won't turn on? When I brought it home from the Goodwill store, I put fresh batteries in it, it wont say anything at all, nothing but dead silence, the dial light wont light up either.I know the battery contacs inside of the radio are clean and in good condition.The radio is in Good physical and cosmetic condition, I think so anyway.It is a heavy radio.

It only has two sections on variable capacitor. TRFs have 3.

Are we talking about the same radio? The P780 has a three section tuner, and can be clearly seen as such in at least three of the pics on the link I posted.

From that article:
"For those who think Dr. Vieira Jr., Ph.D., J.D., is just some run-of-the-mill attorney, let me give you a very condensed bio: He holds four degrees from Harvard. For more than 30 years he has practiced law, with emphasis on constitutional issues. In the Supreme Court of the United States, he successfully argued or briefed the cases leading to the landmark decisions Abood v. Detroit Board of Education, Chicago Teachers Union v. Hudson and Communications Workers of America v. Beck.
His two volume tome, "Pieces of Eight: The Monetary Powers and Disabilities of the United States Constitution," is the most comprehensive study in existence of American monetary law and history viewed from a constitutional perspective."

To call that guy crazy, Dr. Vieira Jr., takes some real balls, no sense mind you, just a lot of balls ...

The magnitude of this crime, which is in progress, the depth and breadth of it, shows you the collaboration, collusion and how large a conspiracy all of our branches can engage in, TOGETHER!

Before this, it was hard to comprehend that such as this could happen, now it is simply a matter of fact.

Dark times lie ahead unless this is straightened out.

Perhaps I am reading what was released incorrectly. I thought that what "they" are saying is that each power station will be an accurate 60 cycle freq, but that individual plants may vary ... I will keep looking for data to clarify this.

But, the simple matter of holding one plant at a rock solid 60 Hz looks simple to me, to the point where it would never be anything but.

Now, the problem of holding the whole grid in sync, quite possibly from coast to coast, is magnitudes more complex and demanding of equipment and resources.

But, at this point, I am simply uncertain what is really being done.

immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears
juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

OK Treat* Yourself All You Want :
* Self-Medicate As Much As You Want and As Long As You Want
-but- DON'T DRIVE [.] -and- DON'T BE ON-THE-JOB [.]
UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF MEDICAL-MARIJUANA !

Reality -so-called- "Medical Marijuana" is a Drug of 'Choice'
-just-like- "Medical Alcohol" is a Drug of 'Choice'

Oops Marijuana is more Persistent {Long Term}
then Alcohol : Greater Drug IMPAIRMENT.

Just Say NO To Drunk {Alcohol} Drivers !
=means=also=
Just Say NO To Drugged {Marijuana} Drivers Too !
Just Say NO To Drunk {Alcohol} Workers !
=means=also=
Just Say NO To Drugged {Marijuana} Workers Too !
MADD : Mothers Against Drunk Drivers {Workers}
CAMD : Citizens Against Marijuana Drivers {Workers}
IMHO Everyone with a Medical-Marijuana Card

{Drug-Need/Drug-Habit} Should Have It "NOTE"
On The Driver's License a/o Have To Surrender Their Driver's License Due To Their 'Chronic' Medical Condition : IT'S A MATTER OF UNIVERSAL PUBLIC SAFETY -versus- Individual Medical Need.
-p/s- Rush Limbaugh Should NOT Have Been Driving When Using Oxycontin [.]

Dave -claims-
"I have half a dozen MDs, I do not "self medicate""
-dave-that's-called-'doctor-shopping'-for-drugs-

Dave : That Still Does NOT Mater :
Be It 1-MD or a 1000-MDs :

DO NOT DRIVE WHILE UNDER-THE-INFLUENCE OF ANY DRUG INCLUDING MEDICAL-MARIJUANA
-come-out-of-the-24/7-purple-drug-haze-first-

DO NOT OPERATE MACHINERY WHILE
UNDER-THE-INFLUENCE OF ANY DRUG
INCLUDING MEDICAL-MARIJUANA
-come-out-of-the-24/7-purple-drug-haze-first-

DO NOT WORK [BE-ON-THE-JOB] WHILE
=Say=YES=To=Drug="Free"=Work=Places=

-cause- UNDER-THE-INFLUENCE [BUZZED]
-is- UNDER-THE-INFLUENCE [IMPAIRED]
Stay Off-the-Road & Stay Home When You Are 'Buzzed' -aka- Impaired.
It used to be said back in the 1960s that just One [1] Marijuana Cigarette was the 'equivalent' of 3-Standard-Drinks :

[Totaling 4.5 Onces of Alcohol]
-and- 3-Drinks Makes You Legally Drunk and Legally Driving-Under-the-Influence "DUI"
http://www.sddefenselawyers.com/californiadui/statistics.html
Caution : It is now often 'claimed' that One [1]
Marijuana Cigarette in 2000s is Ten-Times [10X] more 'Potent' then the 1960s.
-so- One Puff/Toke and You Are In-Fact Buzzed/Zonked and Therefore "Impaired" [.] WARNING : DON'T DRIVE IMPAIRED BY [UNDER-THE-INFLUENCE OF] SO-CALLED "MEDICAL-MARIJUANA" [.]
Medical-Marijuana = Use It; But Don't Drive/Work Impaired [.]
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/b985b8ebf9ff7c4b
OK Treat* Yourself-per-Your-Doctors All You Want :
* MD-Directed-Medicate As Much As You Want
and As Long As You Want
-but- Remember Your Doctor(s) Told-You : DON'T DRIVE [IMPAIRED]
DON'T OPERATE MACHINERY [IMPAIRED]
-and- DON'T BE ON-THE-JOB [IMPAIRED]
-aka- UNDER THE INFLUENCE [IMPAIRED-BY]
OF MEDICAL-MARIJUANA !

Reality -so-called- "Medical Marijuana" is a Drug of 'Choice'
-just-like- "Medical Alcohol" is a Drug of 'Choice'

then Alcohol : Greater Drug IMPAIRMENT.

Just Say NO To Drunk {Alcohol} Drivers !
=means=also=
Just Say NO To Drugged {Marijuana} Drivers Too !
Just Say NO To Drunk {Alcohol} Workers !
=means=also=
Just Say NO To Drugged {Marijuana} Workers Too !
BUZZED DRIVING IS IMPAIRED DRIVING

Be It Alcohol a/o Medical-Marijuana

Buzz-On Dave ! -but- Not Behind The Wheel [.]
http://abcnews.go.com/Health/story?id=1448925
CAMMD : Citizens Against Medical-Marijuana Drivers {Workers}
IMHO : Everyone with a Medical-Marijuana Card

{Drug-Need/Drug-Habit} Should Have It "NOTED" On The Driver's License So LEOs Can Do A Mandatory Field Impairment [DUI] Test On All Card Carrying Medical-Marijuana Users.
a/o Have To Surrender Their Driver's License
Due To Their 'Chronic' Medical Condition :
IT'S A MATTER OF UNIVERSAL PUBLIC SAFETY
-versus- The Individual's Personal Medical Need.
-p/s- Rush Limbaugh Should NOT Have Been Driving When Using [DUI] Oxycontin [.]

Dave -point-of-fact- California State Law Requires
You NOT To Be "Impaired" {Under-the-Influence} While You Are Driving [.]
http://www.sddefenselawyers.com/californiadui/statistics.html

Dave Your 'Personal' Right To Medical-Marijuana
DOES NOT TRUMP PUBLIC SAFETY :
SAFE ROADS AND HIGHWAYS
-just-say-'no'-to-marijuana-impaired-drivers-
-and- SAFE WORK PLACES
-just-say-'no'-to-marijuana-impaired-workers-

again that's how 'i' see it & that's how 'i' feel ~ RHF

I Understand, I Realize about Medical Marijuana, and some people Need Medical Marijuana.
I Understand Cheech and Chong too.

I don't know for sure, but I think there are some people here in the backwater hick land of Missy Sippy (the Magnolia State) who use Medical Marijuana too.I don't bash those people for that.

I buy clippings and water leaves mainly; "House Shake" they call it. It costs $65 an ounce and I just use it to make the hydrocodone go farther; "Vicodin Helper" if you will; and to suppress the urge to lash out. I don't regularly smoke "da kine", but I can drive on anything except downers and liquor.

OH, then you have multiple addictions, you can substitute anything for the wine which killed the wino, I mentioned earlier ...

A drunk, is a drunk, is a drunk ... no matter what the preference of drug.

And, then, you have the gall to expect to include you in rational conversations amongst clear minded individuals ... those drugs have done much more brain damage than you realize.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

> Yes, he

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at
birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who,
prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

Everybody has one, an A..hole, that is.Even my little couch buddy doggy has one too.She kicks her four feet backwards after she takes a poop, natural instinc, she thinks she covers that poop over with grass and dirt.Cats do that too.I used to have some cats.Those cats would dig a little hole in the ground.They usually missed the hole.

Well, it still is kinda confusing, and for the reason(s) that author points out, the AP document is saying different freq on the say grid, for example, one might be 59.5 Hz, one 60.0 Hz and one 60.5 Hz, which would be impossible, as vast amount of power would be shorted at points on the cycles where the freqs were not in sync, meaning huge heat developed in various components of the grid and the powerlines themselves ... and as he states "impossible", at least appears so to me ...

So, to run different freqs you would have to section up the grid so no two plants/sources could power/sink the other and create these losses and heat ... which were not in phase with each other.

And, actually, is more complicated than that, but is about the extent of my knowledge in the grid system, I know they have some tricks and exotic equipment though ...

I suspect the problem is that the news personnel is not accurately regurgitating the experts comments correctly ...

Like I say, I strongly think this is another y2k fear spree which will pass without a whimper.

JS

Whatever they do with the 60Hz standard is NOT going to fly unnoticed . Synchronized power grid has worked for many , many years and many different machines (besides the alarm clocks) are dependent upon a stable , reliable frequency source . If something works so well -- then why would somebody want to mess it up ?

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at
birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who,
prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Actually, timing clocks by the freq of the nations power source seems like an idea whose time has come and gone, to me.

You computer could not function if it used the time source from the powerlines, at least it would produce erroneous results, at best.

Holding all power plants in sync just for the purpose of clocks seems a no go, especially if you can just adjust the frequency for phasing plants together on the fly.

There is always wwv, the time component in GPS, phone, web, etc. which provide better or at least equal accuracy.

But hey, like I say, I am no expert.

Do they even manufacture a clock which is dependent on the syncing signal from the power line, any more?

The clock in my car has not been adjusted in over a year, it is still within 1 minute of the clock in my laptop (probably dead on, actually) ... I suspect it stays in sync by using the GPS time component of the equipment in the car ...

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your
immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

Dear JS,

I don't have the energy to read your links, but I'd like to understand the thinking of one of the lone birther holdouts. What exactly is your theory?

A) Obama was born in the US but is not a citizen because his old man wasn't a US citizen
B) Obama was not born in US (please provide your theory on your place of birth, if you answer B)
C) Obama was born in Hawaii but his certificate is bogus so he has no proof of citizenship and shouldn't be president
D) None of the above (please explain).

Because the frequency shift comes from loading down the grid. And to keep it stable, they fire up the peaking plants. These are gas turbines or a big coal plant that they keep on standby. Either way, it's expensive.
This way they can skimp a little bit on that.

The World Radio TV Handbook had notes for each country that doesn't have grid stable enough to run a clock. Welcome to the Third World.

NONE OF THE ABOVE.

He needs to present a valid birth certificate so we can know the truth
... as, obama himself gave it all away:

The only people who don't want to disclose the truth are people with something to hide. -- barry soetoro AKA barack obama

One thing for damn sure, the man he is claiming is his father made him ineligible to be president. Another is, there is good evidence that he may have been born off American soil, etc.

So, NONE OF THE ABOVE might, just possibly, be ALL OF THE ABOVE!

But, it is all a pretty moot point now, he has engaged in attempting to betray the American peoples trust with a false birth certificate and using it actually "beg" campaign contributions ... major felonies ...

The FBI only needs to walk into his office, with congress backing, and the military, if necessary, and simply say, "Mr. Obama, we'd like you to come with us please ..."

Why don't you geniuses post to your own groups? At the very minimum, remove rec.radio.shortwave from your oh-so-interesting postings.

I don't think the golfing community gives a rat's ass about these Smarten up. Quit inflicting this bullshit on people who have absolutely

What it T'IS, I fixed up six slim narrow strips of wood with a long narrow point on them and I painted them white.Doggy isn't used to pooping in the back yard.When she takes a poop, I push one of the sticks in the ground near her poop.Then I wait about 24 hours, that makes it easier for me to use two little pieces of plywood to pick up her poop and I throw the poop under one of the trees in my back yard.Good thinking, eh?

Seriously.
Why settle for the Lesser Evil?
Why settle for anything Less than 125% capital gains tax?

That's right! you earn $100, and you owed him $125!
OBAMA, like Yeltsin will loot food from people's tables and food from their mouths.

http://web.archive.org/web/20000606152725/http://hudson.org/averydoc9l.htm
The American Chamber of Commerce in Russia figures that taxes extract about 125 rubles for every 100 rubles of after-tax pay.

I tried to represent a better America when I was president.
But now I don't have to...
-- CLINTON.

When Josef Stalin was on his deathbed he called in two likely successors, to test which one of the two had a better knack for ruling the country.

He ordered two birds to be brought in and presented one bird to each of the two candidates. The first one grabbed the bird, but was so afraid that the bird could free himself from his grip and fly away that he squeezed his hand very hard, and when he opened his palm, the bird was dead.

Seeing the disapproving look on Stalin's face and being afraid to repeat his rival's mistake, the second candidate loosened his grip so much that the bird freed himself and flew away.

Stalin looked at both of them scornfully. "Bring me a bird!" he ordered.
They did. Stalin took the bird by its legs and slowly, one by one, he plucked all the feathers from the bird's little body.

Then he opened his palm. The bird was laying there naked, shivering, helpless. Stalin looked at him, smiled gently and said,

"You see... and he is even thankful for the human warmth coming out of my palm."

"We're going to take things away from you in the name of the Common Good".
-- Hillary.

This is the Village it take.
She STILL has SUCH sights to show you.

So you can't even grow your own vegetable garden in your own property in the land of the free? That's insane. And what's even more insane is people will probably find an excuse to side with the crooks who are out to get her.

It's a matter of "how much" is "too much". Unlike you, I don't eat all my meds at once, as soon as I get home. If I was irresponsible they would cut me off. Their necks are way out and they know I know that I can't fuck up, or I'm back on aspirin and ice packs. I get drug tested regularly. I get "observed" regularly. I am the poster child for responsible pain intervention. Your constant barrage of insults and baseless pontification proves that some retards don't have misshapen skulls.

Good. Now you can clean up Tuscaloosa, etc.

here is a very strong correlation, then, between a state voting for Republicans and receiving more in federal spending than its residents pay to the federal government in taxes (the rust belt and Texas being notable exceptions). In essence, those in blue states are subsidizing those in red states. Both red and blue states appear to be acting politically in opposition to their economic interests. Blue states are voting for candidates who are likely to continue the policies of red state subsidization while red states are voting for candidates who profess a desire to reduce federal spending (and presumably red state subsidization).

I once had a Hammarlund HQ-180AC. Great rx. I always wanted a Hammarlund SP-600 Super Pro or a Collins R390A but never had the $$$.

Why would Mississippi want to clean up Tuscaloosa (which is in Alabama)?

FROM HER ARTICLE:
"Deception and Lies

We have been deceived and lied to on ever key issue, from illegal immigration, to stimulus packages ï¿½TARP--and quick bail-outs, from clunkers, to an unneeded hate crime bill, to health care, and to global warming (of course we should be good stewards of the Earth and reduce pollution), but the ruse of Goreï¿½s climate change is used as a mantra to make money and to unite people under one causeï¿½albeit a false one. Theyï¿½ve passed bills on phony notes of ï¿½urgency,ï¿½ so no one will be quick enough to counter their actions; theyï¿½ve taken away our industrial base, outsourced our jobs, increased our taxes, sent our money overseas for reasons many Americans donï¿½t believe in (i.e. abortions for young women in third world countries, and to help the poor in foreign lands when there are starving Americans in our own country). We are being manipulated, marginalized, and forsaken for the needs of other people in other nations, over our own desires."

One pretty smart lady ...

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at
birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who,
prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Rupert Murdoch owns it. It's the parent company of Fox. That explains a lot. I wonder how many voice mails of dead people they read in the US...

They were listening to that dead English girl's messages and then deleting them to make room for more. The parents thought she may have been alive because of that.

Murdoch should be in prison.

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears
juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

I'm an APS1 public servant in the Australian Public Service. I may not have much influence but I know the point of a public servant is to serve the public. We are not kings and queens.

Well Jesse hasn't actually explained what they do after their meetings. When they return to their governments how do they influence decisions? And the meetings are once a year, how do they know what will happen in a year? How do they keep the agenda going?

You know, when you read something, you really should make sure you understand what the fuck the article is really about before you make yourself look like a dimbulb.

This is a nothing story, you can't have a garden in your FRONT YARD in many areas, the one I live in included. In the BACK YARD, nobody gives a shit. The dog thing seems to just be petty BS, no shock there.

Can you point me to a reference? They've only had "peaker" plants since the War. It seems if the turbines are slowed by a heavy load in the daytime they could be sped up an equal amount during lower demand, averaging 60 cycles per second over a period of a day

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears
juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at
birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who,
prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

We have just been infiltrated with the criminals, the process of finding

Sounds like Australia might be in better shape at this point, I really can't comment on that, I simply don't know about things in Australia -- only been there once, a long while back, and then only for three months.

The keyword is "could". In a fuel based power system, like on the East Coast, they could also not bother and save some carloads of coal a day.

Since I marinate my brain in four or more radio/podcast science shows each week, and a half a dozen magazines a month, I'm having some trouble remembering where I got it. Possibly "Science Friday" on NPR, at they've had a couple of shows on the grid and renewable power in the past couple of years. Or something in "New Scientist".

Do you think the Commie feds care?

JT said people are going around and cutting the electric cords off of junk appliances that people set out for the garbage trucks to pick up.They go around ahead of the garbage trucks.They cut the cords off for the copper wires.Any kinds of junk appliances I set out for the garbage trucks, I first cut the electric cords off, I save them ergo I never know when they might come in handy for whatever.I have buku electric cords here.

Larry signed up for a research project. Playboy's conducting tests on new stainless steel staples and needed 'heavy user' types in their corrosion studies. I don't imagine you'd want to be on that list.

Judging by the grammar and spelling mistakes, that's actually Roy and Greetings All!

I would second Defcon's choices but I would really love to have all of the selections listed. Really though, if we don't get our choices we still will always want them until we have "it" out of our system. The problem lies in not getting our wants but in getting them and what do we get next. What a lovely problem. Have a great week! Jon Boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at
birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who,
prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Seems like the cited privacy concerns. Why are the citing privacy concerns on a document which SUPPOSEDLY has already been made public record in the release by obama? Well, unless that is fraud obama has released?

THIS:
"The state of Hawaii responded, saying they would not release the information, citing "privacy" concerns. Taitz said the privacy issues should not apply since she is asking for access to a document the President has supposedly already released. She has since filed a motion with the court requesting they compel the government to supply the information."

Come on! Hey, if Obama can't keep the fact he is not qualified to be Sorry, wrong. You are a perfect example of why it is dangerous for uneducated and ignorant morons under the influence of wealthy puppeters to pretend they know something about science when they literally know nothing.

Climate change has been predicted for well over a hundred years by many scientists, irrespective of political affiliation, and has been a point of concern for over 70 years by scientists across the spectrum. It is only the last 30 years or so, since the oil companies have become nervous about their giant profits and have been using their usual propaganda methods to fool dupes like you, that there has been any ill-conceived trumped-up pseudo-science of the type you parrot.

The denial information you peddle is swill, debunked and shredded decades ago by people who actually understand the science. Wise up.

He does it on purpose, trying to get fights going. Ever wonder about his uncontrollable need to spread these contentious postings over so many different newsgroups?

Sure looks like a Government disinformation agent trying to bring down the value of Internet communications. This type usually has multiple personalities. They even bicker among themselves.

If you absolutely HAVE to respond to him, at least don't cross post. It will help to keep the flies away from the proverbial Smith pile.

There is considerable evidence to suggest that cosmic radiation has a great deal to do with cloud formation. It is a legitimate field of study and does not really have much to do with whether global warming is caused by human activity, or not. The weather system of this planet is a good deal more complicated than global warming political pundits, for or against, can, in their tiny little brains, imagine.

At any rate, climate change is evident. The left seems to be saying, if we are ecologically good, everything will be fine. The right seem to be saying, if we are spiritually good, everything will be fine.

Nobody is preparing for it.

Let's get our heads out of the sand.

Actually, this is not the first evidence that cosmic rays are involved in cloud formation.

Back in the caveman days, when Zog said to Ugh, "Hey, is it just me which seems to notice, or are these clouds only forming during the day when the face of the earth is being bombarded by all forms of electromagnetic radiation (low energy cosmic rays) from the sun?

The rest is history! Although progress has been slow, it now looks like Zogs' theory is being vindicated!

Boatanchors were fun when electricity was 2 cents a Kilowatt hour. I've had 2 [ea] R390-As, a Westinghouse branded RA-17 series, RCA 18 Mhz receiver from the War, BC-348, etc. Got it out of my system. Still use tubes for music.

Who predicted an ice age in the 1970s? Time Magazine? The debate is over because the weather has obviously gone to shit. Animals are migrating through the Northwest Passage for the first time in half a million years ferchrissakes! All you have to do is look. Open your eyes.

But, it is natural, or else, at least, some OTHER FACTOR than carbon Umm, the scientists that Time Magazine interviewed. Duh.

Scientists have found other indications of global cooling. For one thing there has been a noticeable expansion of the great belt of dry, high-altitude polar winds - the so-called circumpolar vortex-that sweep from west to east around the top and bottom of the world.

I guess people with 56k dialup panic at todays downloads ... they worry

Good, then you will never have to kludge together an obvious fraudulent birth certificate and attempt to get by on the fools accepting it.

But hey, if you don't have one, obamas fraud is about the best which can be done. I mean, he could have hired a better photoshop artist, however, that only would have complicated the analysis.

I think one of his daughters boyfriends must have kludged this one for

No . Another no. And no again and again . Wisconsin Glacial Period/Event ended roughly 10K to 15K years ago . Which roughly corresponds to similar climatic changes in the Eastern Hemisphere in Siberia .
The fearless Vikings occasionally navigated remote Northern waters until it froze up for good in the 14th century . Oh, what type of animals are migrating through the NW Passage ? Do they look like humans ?

> Yes, he

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

> Yes, he

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears
juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears
juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

His most staggering revelation is that the Earth and the collective human mind is manipulated from the Moon, which, he says, is not a 'heavenly body', but an artificial construct - a gigantic 'spacecraft' (probably a hollowed-out 'planetoid') - which is home to the extraterrestrial group that has been manipulating humanity for aeons.
It's game over for Icky. He is a total loon now.

And now you've flopped back to the kOOkside?

If the average N. Korean could get their hands on McDonald's dumpster refuse, they would feel like they were dining on the finest five star chow.. Most of those elite in N. Korea don't do a lot better, you pretty much have to be in the Kim family inner circle to get real food. Average folks, including their military, subsist on a bowl of rice a day and an occasional bit of meat. This from many of those who have expatriated from there (i.e. bugged out).

Evidence? You mean fact? Take a class or two on human psychology.

In a nutshell it all comes down to sex, drugs, money, power and "rock-n'-roll."

People are not all that complex. Their goals, values and endeavors will all fall along certain lines.

Every heard the saying about absolute power corrupts absolutely?

About a year ago, I went to Acey's shop and I paid over $400.00 for four new Made in Missy Sippy Cooper Tires (what the f... is tyre?) for my old long tall big ass 1983 Dodge van.As little as I drive anywhere anymore (a full tank of gas last me about ten months or more) those new Cooper Tires (yeah, I know what tyre is) will last me the rest of my life.

Only times we ever have any power outages in Missy Sippy is when a storm knocks out the power, or some damn fool runs into a power pole (that does happen a bunch of times) and knocks it down.

Thieves steal 100 storm drain covers in Sacramento.
http://www.drudgereport.com

Bees vera keerful whar you drive in Sacramento.A month or so ago, thieves stold 40 or 45 manhole covers in Greenville,Missy Sippy.I reckon the price of iron has gone UP.They are stealing all kinds of metal everywhere.

Yesteryday, that old crappy rusty metal desk and that old rusted out lawnmower frame and that old crappy rusty long rain gutter I set out front for the garbage truck, I was in my driveway, a dude coming down the street in his car, he stopped and asked me if I was getting rid of that stuff.I told him he can have it.He went and got his truck, he loaded that crap up and hauled it away, I reckon to the scrap iron yard.

Interesting you should ask! On the VOA envelope, the whole works came in a single envelope with a Brussels - Belgium postage stamp affixed to it. ???

On the Cuban envelope, yes, the earlier envelope was sealed unopened within another similar but slightly larger envelope. Both had a prepaid postage stamp on the outside.

Why do these people put up with this shit? I say fuck 'em. If they don't even try to overthrow the bastards the government must not be as bad as they say.

The poor saps are so isolated that the Kims have them actually believing that they have it BETTER than the rest of the world, that S. Korea wants what THEY have! Three generations of propaganda with no outside sources of information is quite powerful.

Not hard to imagine. In this country (the U.S.) we have access to information from everywhere, and we're STILL duped by the government into thinking what they want us to think.

I can remember buy some heavy iron from a scrapper, years ago. If I remember correctly, they bought iron at 4 cents a pound, but they sold it to me for .25 a pound. I bought some 3/8 plate for curb I had to diver over to get in the back of some property I owned. I am still using the plate at different location.

But, my question would be, would he even get a buck for the metal?

And, this is why the forefathers died to guarantee us free speech, creator given rights and the right to the pursuit of happiness.

But still, when you see a group which has let this happen to them, it is hard to have compassion, indeed, it actually inspires anger for them being so stupid!

But, beware, the weak, the lame, the elderly, those lacking the mental reserves ... it could happen here, as hard as that is to believe ... I see there is truth in your words.

OK. Literary license is used, in the above, but the staring morons in korea are engaging in cannibalism, that is a known fact.

This is why we need to be vigilant, face up to reality and get rid of the insane criminals in our government -- the end of the road they enter a very cleverly devised program to overwhelm the economy with debt,

"The fact that we are here today to debate raising America's debt limit is a sign of leadership failure. It is a sign that the US Government cannot pay its own bills. It is a sign that we now depend on ongoing financial assistance from foreign countries to finance our government's reckless fiscal policies. Increasing America's debt weakens us domestically and internationally. Leadership means that 'the buck stops here.' Instead, Washington is shifting the burden of bad choices today onto the backs of our children and grandchildren. America has a debt problem and a failure of leadership. Americans deserve better."

Sen. Barack (Clown 'tard) Obama, 2006

He voted then to NOT increase the debt limit.

Of course, George W. Bush was President at the time.

Debt? I just checked the figures of US public debt since 1945 . BHO is not the biggest culprit, like everybody thinks . Far from it . He is just a small part of the problem . It is known as Guv-mint .

Don't they have any radios in the North ?

---

Very few have any sort of radio or television. These are mostly "community" things. Wouldn't make a lot of sense to have them, since outside of Pyeongyang there's pretty much no electricity, and it's rationed bigtime even in Pyeongyang. They shut it off most of the night and good chunks of the day.

Add to that, for those that have radios, they are set to one station: they have no tuners. If one is caught with a radio that will tune to a station other than the one authorized for their area, it's a death penalty offense.
Hell, practically everything is a death penalty offense; they're not gonna spend precious money and resources keeping a lot of people in prison. One guy was given the firing squad recently for putting up posters (or was it one poster?) against Kim (the dear leader). Those folks are serious.

I had a weird dream last night.I dreamed I was a tourist in India and there was a little American girl who was touring in India with a group of people.She had already gone back to America.She had made up a big lie about a tourist trap tower in Delhi, the tower had a restaurant and a gift shop, the tower was over a mile high. Everybody around the World believed her lies.She was instantly famous.The FBI was asking her all kinds of questions, people were driving up and down her street honking their horns and shouting at her.Meanwhile, I hired a lady Indian tour guide.We caught a train to Delhi.We were in a hotel room and kissing.What woke me from my dream was my dog was kissing me.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at
birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who,
prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

From Tad Cook, K7RA

To all radio amateurs

SB PROP ARL ARLP029
ARLP029 Propagation de K7RA

Average daily sunspot numbers for the week rose nearly 27 points to 92.4, while average daily solar flux increased over 9 points to 98.2. The latest prediction has solar flux values for the next week a little lower than those listed in Thursday's ARRL Letter. Expected values are 96 for today, July 22, then 95 on July 23-27, 98 on July 28, 90 on July 29 through August 2, 95 on August 3-7, 98 on August 8, and back to 100 on August 9-16.

Planetary A index for July 22-23 is predicted at 10 and 8, then 5 on July 24-28, 8 on July 29-31, then 10, 8, 5 and 8 on August 1-4, 12 on August 5-7, and 8 on August 8-10.

Geophysical Institute Prague has a weekly prediction for geomagnetic indices that doesn't use the A or K index, but instead has seven levels of activity, from quiet to severe storm. Their prediction for this week says to expect unsettled conditions for today, July 22, quiet to unsettled on July 23, quiet July 24-25, quiet to unsettled July 26-27, and quiet again on July 28.

There seem to be plenty of sunspots visible over the past week, but nothing really large or very active. Sunspot areas are counted in millionths of a solar hemisphere, and on Thursday, July 14, there were six sunspot groups visible: 1245, 1250, 1251, 1252, 1254 and 1255. The area ranged from 5 for sunspot group 1245 to 100 each for groups 1250 and 1251. Total sunspot area for that day was 265.

On Friday, July 15, a new sunspot group 1256 was added, and total sunspot area was 260, as the other sunspot groups shrank, except for 1251 and 1254. On July 16, 1255 disappeared, and total sunspot area dropped to 230. On Sunday, July 17, sunspot areas 1245 and 1252 disappeared, new group 1257 was added, and total sunspot area grew to 280.

On Monday, July 18 sunspot area jumped to 400 when two new groups, 1258 and 1259 were added. On July 19 sunspot area jumped again to 660, when 1255 disappeared and all sunspot groups except 1256 grew. 1250, 1257 and 1258 each doubled in size, while 1259 more than tripled.

On July 20, 1256 and 1257 disappeared, and sunspot area dropped by more than half to 310. Yesterday, July 21, 1250 and 1258 went away, and sunspot area declined from 310 to 290, and daily sunspot number declined from 79 to 56.

There has been quite a bit of news about a predicted grand minima in solar activity. We recently reported on a conference in which three lines of evidence were presented which seemed to point to a future disappearance of sunspots, perhaps like the dreaded Maunder Minimum.

I am not unbiased in this regard, and like most amateur radio operators yearn for high solar activity. Alas, a return of cycle 19, the granddaddy of them all, seems elusive. But there is some dissent regarding these predictions of no sunspots, which gives us hope.

On Wednesday I spoke with Dr. Douglas Biesecker, an astrophysicist at the NOAA Space Environment Center in Boulder. He was mentioned in ARLP024 (see http://www.arrl.org/w1aw-bulletins-archive/ARLP024/2011) as dissenting from the assertion that evidence points toward sunspots disappearing or another Maunder Minimum in our future.

He mentioned something called a Gleissberg Cycle. What happens when we do a really long smoothing of sunspot numbers? The smoothed sunspot numbers we are familiar with, the data used in those nice graphs of sunspot cycles, average data over 13 months. So every place you look on the graph doesn't show the variation that occurred during that month, but instead averages data over more than a year, to smooth out all the noise of daily variations.

But what would happen if you smoothed the numbers over a much longer period, say 11 years? Could you find some periodicity that would suggest a cycle of cycles, or perhaps predict clusters of decades with low or high solar activity?

Gleissberg cycles suggest a periodicity of about 87 years, and some have studied these to try to predict general levels of solar activity over multiple decades. But if a cycle is 87 years long, and we only have about 256 years of directly observed solar data, the most we could look at would be less than three cycles. That isn't enough data to make even crude speculative projections.

Doug mentioned what he referred to as an "old NASA axiom", that goes something like this: If you can't see something happen seven times, it isn't real.

Doug said he is attending SHINE workshops, and SHINE is an acronym for Solar Heliospheric and Interplanetary Environment (see http://shinecon.org/). At these meetings participants have been hashing out the evidence for or against a "no cycle 25" scenario, and discovering some problems with the three lines of evidence pointing toward a disappearance of sunspots. They haven't reached a consensus, but he believes that positions may be moving away from predicting another Maunder Minimum.

On this topic, take a look at this website: http://www.thesuntoday.org/current-observations/solar-hibernation-much-ado-about-nothing/.

A new issue of WorldRadio is available on the twentieth of each month, and on July 20 the August 2011 issue was out. You can get one at http://www.worldradiomagazine.com/ and on page 20 you'll find the monthly Propagation column by Carl Luetzelschwab, K9LA. This time it is titled "Here's Some Help to Explain Those Unusual QSOs". Carl looks at propagation that doesn't seem to be supported by the MUF or general level of solar activity at the time, and offers some interesting ideas on what might really be going on.

If you are fortunate enough to be in Kansas City this weekend, you can catch Carl's talk on propagation at W0DXCC-2011 on Saturday, July 23. His talk begins at 9:30 AM in the W0JM Room, and is titled "Our Recent Sunspot Minimum, and the new Sunspot Cycle 24". Check http://www.w0dxcc.com/ for details.

Estimated planetary A indices were 8, 6, 6, 5, 8, 18, and 19, with a mean of 10. Estimated mid- latitude A indices were 6, 5, 4, 3, 6, 10, and 12, with a mean of 6.6.

Nightly discussions of the concept of a news magazine led the two, both age 23, to quit their jobs in 1922. Later that same year the two formed Time Inc. It is said that the two originally thought of TIME Magazine during their time in the "tomb" of Skull and Bones...By the mid 1960s, Time Inc. was the largest and most prestigious magazine publisher in the world. ...
Luce, who remained editor-in-chief of all his publications until 1964, maintained a position as an influential member of the Republican Party.[2] Holding anti-communist sentiments, used Time to support right-wing dictatorships in the name of fighting communism. An instrumental figure behind the so-called "China Lobby", he played a large role in steering American foreign policy and popular sentiment in favor of Nationalist leader Chiang Kai-shek and his wife Soong Mei-ling in their war against the Japanese. (The Chiangs appeared in the cover of Time eleven times between 1927 and 1955.[3])
It has been reported that Luce, during the 1960's tried LSD and reported that he had talked to God under its influence.[4]

RACAL on the front panel, Westinghouse on the procurement tag. My model had 2 front ends with common oscillators, for diversity use. Thing weighed 90 pounds without the power supply. An extremely quiet and sensitive receiver. Used a roll of 35mm film for the kilocycles scale.
Used about 32 tubes as I recall. First use of collett knobs ever noted by this reporter.

A traitor is one who gives aid and comfort to a declared enemy of war, and since we ain't been at war since August 1945, Obama being a traitor is impossible.

However, the plot to bury the country in debt and misery is real. It is however the work of right wingers and their "starve the beast" strategy.
Look it up.

The fact that you think Obama's doing it speaks volumes about the quality of "News" one gets in upper midwest militia-ville.

Another artifact from Reagan that is still bleeding our country dry,

What I have can't be "cured". I'm pretty sure I got it from my Dad (or "papa" as you quaintly spew). Your eagerness to pass judgment on others means you are either Divinely Perfect or another typical American dick.

Seeing as you have all the answers, please give us your explanation for the following:

* George W. Bush raised the debt limit S-E-V-E-N times during his 8 years in office.

* The Republicans passed it S-E-V-E-N times with nary a whimper, just rubber-stamped it, just routine.

* Today, these very same Republicans have escalated this to a national (if not world-wide) crisis. They are holding us hostage, trying to blackmail the country.

What's wrong with that picture, hmmm????

Over the years, you have shown that detecting irony is not your strong suit; however, even you can't fail to note the irony (and dare I say it, hypocrisy) here.

P.S.

Gee, do you think this has -nothing- to do with economics but -everything- to do the publicly stated "Job One" of the Repubs to see that Obama not be re-elected, and that they will do everything in their power to make it happen, the rest of the country be damned.

P.P.S.

A real, thoughtful, intelligent answer would reflect well on you, as opposed to your usual bluster and name calling.

ISN'T IT OBVIOUS to all but you brainless racists among us that the "Boehner Plan" is aimed squarely at making Obama the first president to preside over a U.S. DEFAULT?

Such a tag would ensure our president would be a one-termer, a wish that has been propounded publicly numerous times by the likes of Mitch "Where's My Chin?" McConnell and others.

But, since the Boehner Boys are acting very un-Americanlike, truly enemies of the people and their nation -- aren't there "methods" for dealing with such traitorism?

Basically it's people who live near by who are scared of the rest of the world. Which means, in Norway, it's Norwegians; in the U.S., it's USAmericans; in Pakistan, it's Pakistanis.

We used to be, I don't know anyone who thinks that now, mainly because:

be there.

2) Masses of homeless are among us.

3) Unemployment is out of hand.

4) Our criminal government is using our military to rape, pillage and plunder other nations and handing joe six-pack the bill.

5) The poor are taxed to death while the rich elite go on in their extravagant lifestyles.

6) False flag crimes have been committed as scare tactics to subdue Americans and hold them in a mindset which allows them to be controlled.

7) No thinking men and women have any respect left for their public servants and government.

8) Groups of special people are being created which are above the law and escape punishments which are inflicted on the average American.

9) The schools are a joke and focused on sports and teaching respect for perversions and sickness.

10) Criminal corporations, banksters, wall street rich elite are pulling the strings on the puppets which have usurped our public servant offices.

11) Etc., etc., etc.

Fascism is a form of government which centers all power [House, Senate and Judiciary] in a single party [Liberal Fascist JackAss Democrats] headed by an absolute dictater [0baMa0 Tse Dung].

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/Communist is a Fascist according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.
Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plan truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

Pt.2 http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Dvuxr7v4xzk

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

These people saw in Fascism a protection against the demands of farmers and other workers... Both regimes at first upheld the rights of private property... THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Jim Rogers: US to Default 'One Way or Another' as Debt Talks a 'Sham'
Tuesday, 12 Jul 2011 11:37 AM
By Forrest Jones, MoneyNews.com

The United States is going to "default one way or the other" and talks between Republican and Democratic leaders to lift the debt ceiling are "a sham" that won't do anything to prevent it, says international investor Jim Rogers.

Lawmakers will probably find a way to lift the $14.3 trillion debt ceiling, which the government says has to happen by Aug. 2, but gaping deficits have and will inflict enough damage to the dollar that a default is unavoidable.

Plus the debate will resume shortly after Aug. 2 anyway, as the government will quickly spend beyond its means again.

"It might be good for the world if the United States closed down for a while, but I can’t see that happening," Rogers tells Fox Business.

"Something will happen, things will look better, but then in six months or a year, things will be worse again."

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-NV) takes definitive action:

Senate rejects House GOP budget-cutting plan
By JIM KUHNHENN - Associated Press | AP – 19 hrs ago

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama and House Speaker John Boehner searched on Friday for an elusive debt-limit compromise as the Senate rejected a House plan containing deep spending cuts and for the moment put aside a last-ditch fallback option.

The 51-46 party-line Senate vote, and a decision by Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., to cancel weekend Senate sessions, left unresolved the urgent issue of how to lift the nation's borrowing powers to avoid a first-ever U.S. default on Aug. 3.

The Default Lie Continues

It never stops — the lies of the left.

Yesterday at his press conference, President 0bama stood in front of the press and the nation and repeated the lie that increasing the debt limit means defaulting on our national debt.

“By August 2nd, we run out of tools to make sure that all our bills are paid. So that is a hard deadline. And I want everybody to understand that this is a jobs issue. This is not an abstraction. If the United States government, for the first time, cannot pay its bills, if it defaults, then the consequences for the U.S. economy will be significant and unpredictable. And that is not a good thing..”

“We don’t know how capital markets will react. But if capital markets suddenly decide, you know what, the U.S. government doesn’t pay its bills, so we’re going to start pulling our money out, and the U.S. Treasury has to start to raise interest rates in order to attract more money to pay off our bills, that means higher interest rates for businesses; that means higher interest rates for consumers. So all the headwinds that we’re already experiencing in terms of the recovery will get worse.”

Uh, no. If we don’t pay our debts, then the people lending us the money will stop lending us money, or charge us a much higher price for it. But hitting the debt limit will not force a default any more than a person who has maxed out his credit cards will default on them if the bank doesn’t raise his credit limit.

President 0bama goes on to address this point with another bald-faced lie. (Is that why politicians don’t have beards, because then their lies would not be bald-faced? But I digress.)

“Point number two, I want to address what I’ve been hearing from some quarters, which is, well, maybe this debt limit thing is not really that serious; we can just pay interest on the debt. This idea has been floating around in some Republican circles.This is the equivalent of me saying, you know what, I will choose to pay my mortgage, but I’m not going to pay my car note. Or I’m going to pay my car note but I’m not going to pay my student loan. Now, a lot of people in really tough situations are having to make those tough decisions. But for the U.S. government to start picking and choosing like that is not going to inspire a lot of confidence."

"Moreover, which bills are we going to decide to pay? These guys have said, well, maybe we just pay the interest on — for bondholders. So are we really going to start paying interest to Chinese who hold treasuries and we're not going to pay folks their Social Security checks? Or we're not going to pay to veterans for their disability checks? I mean, which bills, which obligations, are we going to say we don't have to pay?."

Bills are not obligations. Obligations are those things that one has to pay to avoid being in default. Mortgages, car loans, and student loans are debts. Things like next month's bills — cable, trash, water, power — are not obligations. If you cannot afford them, cancel them or reduce your usage to lower your costs. He gives more bad examples to reinforce the lie:

"And last point I want to make about this. These are bills that Congress ran up. The money has been spent. The obligations have been made. So this isn't a situation — I think the American people have to understand this — this is not a situation where Congress is going to say, okay, we won't — we won't buy this car or we won't take this vacation. They took the vacation. They bought the car. And now they're saying maybe we don't have to pay, or we don't have to pay as fast as we said we were going to, or — that's not how responsible families act. And we're the greatest nation on Earth, and we can't act that way."

Congress has not already spent the money on Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, Unemployment Insurance, defense, courts, etc. Congress has promised to spend that money, but it is under no obligation to do so. If we hit the debt ceiling, the Treasury Secretary decides which bills to pay first. If the nation's top tax cheat chooses not to make our debt payments, then we will default on our national debt and our Treasury Secretary will be solely to blame for the default. Congress should immediately pass a bill requiring that our debt obligations be paid first.

Then what? 0bama does have a point that we need to make choices. Well, that choice is actually quite simple — pay what we are contracted to pay. Contracts, like debt payments, are obligations. Defense contracts are — until the contract expires. Employee salaries (including soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines) are — up until the employee's contract is terminated. Social welfare payments, however, are not contracts.

From the description given here it is none other than RA153X . Made in the UK . Westinghouse just put their name on it for the same old reason : to chisel the guv-mint . Nothing new under the sun . I used to have a regular issue Ra-17 . Very inconvenient tuning .Preselector (excellent feature) . Very stable (has Wadley Loop). Very heavy .
Exceptional workmanship . It was built to be used in a lab.I just cannot see it being hauled around by any soldier in any conflict . In other words-- it is a monster .

"[...] he didn't belong to any known factions in Norway's small and splintered extreme right movement, and had no criminal record except for some minor offenses, the police official told AP."

"He hasn't been on our radar, which he would have been if was active in the neo-Nazi groups in Norway"

"His main enemy is [...] multiculturalists and what he calls cultural marxists."

Leon Trotsky in Norway

For a certain period of time, the Norwegian Labor Party belonged to the Communist International. It then broke with the Comintern (and the Comintern was not completely to blame for the rupture) without, nevertheless, affiliating itself with the Second International, which was too opportunistic for its taste. When this party came to power in 1935, it still felt some links with its past. I hastened to ask Oslo for a visa, hoping to be able peacefully to pursue my literary work in this calm country.

After some hesitation and some squabbling among the leaders of the party, I was granted an entry visa. I gladly signed the agreement not to intervene in the internal life of the country, etc., having no intention whatsoever of becoming involved in Norwegian politics. From my very first contacts with the leaders of the Labor Party, I got a strong whiff of the stale odor of the musty conservatism denounced with such vigor in Ibsen’s plays. It is true that the central organ of the party, Arbeiderbladet, invoked Marx and Lenin, and not the Bible and Luther, but it remained permeated with the shallow, well-meaning mediocrity that inspired such unconquerable aversion in Marx and Lenin.

The “Socialist” government made every effort to be as much like its reactionary predecessors as it possibly could. The old bureaucracy, in its entirety, stayed on. Was that good or bad? I soon had occasion to become convinced, by experience, that the old bourgeois functionaries sometimes have a broader viewpoint and a more profound sense of dignity than Messrs. “Socialist” Ministers. With the exception of a semi-official visit from Martin Tranmael, the leader of the Norwegian Labor Party (who, during his stay in the United States, had – a youthful abberation! – once belonged to the IWW), and from Trygve Lie, the minister of justice, I had no personal relations with anyone in government circles. I had almost no contact with the radicals, in order to avoid even the appearance of mixing into local politics.

My wife and I lived in extreme isolation, without thinking of feeling sorry for ourselves. A very friendly relationship was established with the Knudsens, politics being, by tacit consent, excluded from our conversations. During the moments of respite my illness afforded, I worked on The Revolution Betrayed, trying to bring out clearly the causes of the victory of the Soviet bureaucracy over the party, the soviets, and the people, and to sketch perspectives for the subsequent development of the USSR. On August 5 [1936] I sent the first copies of the finished manuscript to the American and French translators. The very same day, with Konrad Knudsen and his wife, we left for the south of Norway, where we were to spend two weeks at the seashore. But the following morning, while still en route, we learned that a group of fascists had forced their way into the house to steal my archives. It was not a hard thing to do: the house was not guarded – even the closets and cupboards were kept unlocked. Norwegians are so accustomed to the peaceful rhythm of their lives that we had not been able to get our friends to take even the most elementary precautions.

The fascists arrived at midnight, displayed fake police badges, and sought to begin the “house search” right away. Our hosts daughter found this suspicious, did not lose her presence of mind, and stood with arms outspread in front of the door to my room, declaring that she would let no one enter. Five fascists, still inexperienced in this kind of thing, found themselves put out of countenance by the courage of a young girl. Meanwhile, her younger brother gave the alarm; neighbors appeared on the scene in their nightclothes. The frightened invaders fled, taking with them a few papers snatched at random from the nearest table. The next day, and without difficulty, the police established their identity.

It seemed that life would return to its usual calm. But, continuing our journey to the south, we noticed that an automobile with four fascists, led by the engineer N., their propaganda director, was following us. We succeeded in getting rid of our pursuers only at the end of the trip, by not letting their car onto the ferry that was to take us to the other side of the fjord. We spent ten very peaceful days in the solitary fisherman’s cottage built on the rocks of the tiny island.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does

that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plan truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

"For example, exhibits 50 and 51 [Corsi's book] are screen captures of the original (and "scrubbed") Modern Ghana website, from October 9, 2008, only days from the election. Next to a photo of Obama and his wife, Michelle, the fourth paragraph contains the line, "the first-ever African-American president on this presidential visit to the continent of his birth."

"Indeed, Obama, as Corsi documents, Obama was a Muslim in Indonesia from the ages of 6-10. Exhibit 94 on page 210, his school registration card, under the name "Barry Soetoro," lists his religion as "Islam." In this one instance, Corsi has uncovered what many Americans believe: The American president has a Muslim background. Such information is not forthcoming from the White House today, yet this piece of information has huge implications for our country."

4381. Latest Liberty Net via WB4AIO

http://3950.net/2011/07/liberty-net-july-16-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

ITï¿½S AMAZING to listen to the Liberty Net ï¿½ not just for the wealth of uncensored information that you and others can share there, but also for the decades-long friendships that the net has brought into being. It all started in 1974, making it the longest-running serious discussion net on the amateur airwaves.

Hereï¿½s a brief summary of some of the topics covered this time on radioï¿½s most exciting net:

ï¿½ How can Barack Obama ï¿½ who broke every promise he ever made about the economy; who broke every promise he ever made to end the wars; who broke every promise he ever made to poor people ï¿½ still garner support from a third of the polled electorate? The answer: pure racial politics, which, like it or not, is the inevitable wave of the future. (34 minutes)

ï¿½ Anyone interested in the regimeï¿½s handover of more and more land and resources to our Chinese creditors should watch the original Star Trek episode titled ï¿½Omega Glory,ï¿½ which describes a similar scenario. (42 minutes)

ï¿½ Drunken spenders (like the regime in Washington) have a symbiotic relationship with drunken lenders (like the commercial banks) ï¿½ and both of them are bleeding us dry. (44 minutes)

ï¿½ Now that we are so broke that every foreign aid dollar must be a borrowed dollar, why in Hell are we continuing to enslave the next generation in order to buy more missiles for Israel? (53 minutes)

ï¿½ Who will be the lender of last resort when the money runs out and America turns into Greece writ large? The American people, of course ï¿½ except we will be ï¿½lendingï¿½ involuntarily and it wonï¿½t really be lending: It will be theft, poverty, and slavery. (1 hour 28 minutes)

ï¿½ There is a legal concept called ï¿½odious debtï¿½ which regards all debts made by any government which is acting against the interests of its own people as null and void. By that standard, all of the debts entered into by the regime in Washington are totally invalid. (1 hour 54 minutes)

ï¿½ Simple cash management techniques could solve the deficit crisis in one day ï¿½ if Congress wasnï¿½t in bed with the oligarchs, and had the courage to immediately end the wars and send the Mestizo invaders home. (2 hours 55 minutes)

ï¿½ The financial crisis is just a symptom of a much larger and more deadly problem: the demographic and genetic decline of America. (3 hours 1 minute)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to these Liberty Net recordings at home, at work, in your car, or while hiking or jogging with your portable mp3 player. And remember N2SAGï¿½s live feed during Net times that lets you hear the Liberty Net via multiple receivers ï¿½ and chat too.

Check out, and check in to, amateur radioï¿½s most exciting net every Saturday night ï¿½ usually somewhere above 3950 kHz SSB (in recent weeks above that frequency by 30 kHz or so ï¿½ we have to be flexible to evade jammers and intruders), starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio!

I stick to the slow poke back roads, ergo I like to drive slowwwwww.Even so, I am always ahead of the people behind me.

Last year when I was working on my front porch, old country boy from Edwards,Missy Sippy, he told my next door neighbor, He's got some kind of a horn over there!!!

The Dangerous Walmart store has some Loud squeeze bulb clamp on horns, like the kind you would clamp on your bicycle handlebars, I saw them when I was over there a few weeks ago.Next time I go over there I am going to buy one of those horns and clamp it on my lawnmower.

The proverbial "end" came and went. We are now in the "Post End Times". Telling kids not hassle the queers and that if they are a queer it's OK, is not promoting "sexual deviation". Human sexuality is by definition "deviant". That's what separates us from most other animals.

> to preside over a U.S. DEFAULT?

I think it's time for a retrospective on the Obama Administration's and the Democrat's previous spending, in order to fuly understand just how we got to this point.

From the January 28, 2009 "Review & Outlook" section of the Wall Street Journal comes:
A 40-Year Wish List
You won't believe what's in that stimulus bill..

"Never let a serious crisis go to waste. What I mean by that is it's an opportunity to do things you couldn't do before."

So said White House Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel in November, and Democrats in Congress are certainly taking his advice to heart. The 647-page, $825 billion House legislation is being sold as an economic "stimulus," but now that Democrats have finally released the details we understand Rahm's point much better. This is a political wonder that manages to spend money on just about every pent-up Democratic proposal of the last 40 years.

We've looked it over, and even we can't quite believe it. There's $1 billion for Amtrak, the federal railroad that hasn't turned a profit in 40 years; $2 billion for child-care subsidies; $50 million for that great engine of job creation, the National Endowment for the Arts; $400 million for global-warming research and another $2.4 billion for carbon-capture demonstration projects. There's even $650 million on top of the billions already doled out to pay for digital TV conversion coupons.

In selling the plan, President Obama has said this bill will make "dramatic investments to revive our flagging economy." Well, you be the judge. Some $30 billion, or less than 5% of the spending in the bill, is for fixing bridges or other highway projects. There's another $40 billion for broadband and electric grid development, airports and clean water projects that are arguably worthwhile priorities.

Add the roughly $20 billion for business tax cuts, and by our estimate only $90 billion out of $825 billion, or about 12 cents of every $1, is for something that can plausibly be considered a growth stimulus.

And even many of these projects aren't likely to help the economy immediately. As Peter Orszag, the President's new budget director, told Congress a year ago, "even those [public works] that are 'on the shelf' generally cannot be undertaken quickly enough to provide timely stimulus to the economy."

Most of the rest of this project spending will go to such things as renewable energy funding ($8 billion) or mass transit ($6 billion) that have a low or negative return on investment. Most urban transit systems are so badly managed that their fares cover less than half of their costs. However, the people who operate these systems belong to public-employee unions that are campaign contributors to . . . guess which party?

Here's another lu-lu: Congress wants to spend $600 million more for the federal government to buy new cars. Uncle Sam already spends $3 billion a year on its fleet of 600,000 vehicles. Congress also wants to spend $7 billion for modernizing federal buildings and facilities. The Smithsonian is targeted to receive $150 million; we love the Smithsonian, too, but this is a job creator?

Another "stimulus" secret is that some $252 billion is for income-transfer payments -- that is, not investments that arguably help everyone, but cash or benefits to individuals for doing nothing at all. There's $81 billion for Medicaid, $36 billion for expanded unemployment benefits, $20 billion for food stamps, and $83 billion for the earned income credit for people who don't pay income tax. While some of that may be justified to help poorer Americans ride out the recession, they aren't job

As for the promise of accountability, some $54 billion will go to federal programs that the Office of Management and Budget or the Government Accountability Office have already criticized as "ineffective" or unable to pass basic financial audits. These include the Economic Development Administration, the Small Business Administration, the 10 federal job training programs, and many more.

Oh, and don't forget education, which would get $66 billion more. That's more than the entire Education Department spent a mere 10 years ago and is on top of the doubling under President Bush. Some $6 billion of this will subsidize university building projects. If you think the intention here is to help kids learn, the House declares on page 257 that "No recipient . . . shall use such funds to provide financial assistance to students to attend private elementary or secondary schools." Horrors: Some money might go to nonunion teachers.

The larger fiscal issue here is whether this spending bonanza will become part of the annual "budget baseline" that Congress uses as the new floor when calculating how much to increase spending the following year, and into the future. Democrats insist that it will not. But it's hard -- no, impossible -- to believe that Congress will cut spending next year on any of these programs from their new, higher levels. The likelihood is that this allegedly emergency spending will become a permanent addition to federal outlays -- increasing pressure for tax increases in the bargain. Any Blue Dog Democrat who votes for this ought to turn in his "deficit hawk" credentials.

This is supposed to be a new era of bipartisanship, but this bill was written based on the wish list of every living -- or dead -- Democratic interest group. As Speaker Nancy Pelosi put it, "We won the election. We wrote the bill." So they did. Republicans should let them take all of the credit.

Actually, no, it doesn't. The state militias could have been effectively disarmed by the central government if it ignored Art I(8)(16). Therefore the Second Amendment was passed to protect the right to keep and bear arms of the populace (read people) so that the pool of armed citizenry from which the state militias were drawn would remain in place with no interference from the federal government.

Fascism is a form of government which centers all power [House, Senate headed by an absolute dictater [0baMa0 Tse Dung].

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does

that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plan truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

These people saw in Fascism a protection against the demands of farmers and other workers... Both regimes at first upheld the rights of private property... THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Hey, dipshit retarded one...

Have your sister come over here and blow me, boy.

Obama is a two-bit punk! Heck, he doesn't even care about his relatives who live in squalor. What a guy! He could send his brother $20 which would more than double his income, and, his brother could probably afford a 'double-wide' hut.

You dumb sand niggers (sorry, I categorize ya all this way) need to understand that you need to get your collective shit together...

Obviously another clueless Canadian Cunt.

I'm waiting for Obama to start chucking spears and promising everyone their own hut and and a $12 stipend a year.

Better naked than Marxist!

How the f00k would you know what I intended or not you worthless piece of Canadian excrement?

Tamp some cotton in it, little girl.

In all fairness, it is I who make you drool on command, dumbass.

I'll bet you use those Vise-Grip's when the gerbils get stuck, right?

You were an automatic dumbass at birth.

However, a pile of crap (such as yourself) is an idiot!

Quit crossposting, ya little queer Canuck.

"Do you realize how childish you look?"
Nope, I refuse to look in the mirror.

Take a walk, buttfuck.

Sheesh... another f00kin queer!

I ain't white, but unlike you, I dislike no one.

Come on! How can anyone be straight after free beer and sausages

You are indeed a queer, are you not?

Who will you be bunking with, Bob?

Come lick me homo boy.

Come and arrest me, cockbite.

Yep, the Great Spirit watches over us all!

You are worthless.

Yeah, go ahead, you drooling idiot.

Nope, but you're a faggot now, right?

Yer mama tossed ya because you're a homo boy, ain't that true?

Did I make any distinction with regard to country, you pedantic little cocksucker?

Blow me, faggot boy!

Fuck YOU, and fuck CanaDuh.

Now asswipe, go take your meds.

Take your meds, retard.

Humanity would be better served if 'Eduardo' were to take his shtick to the fields and began picking lettuce.

And, 'Eddy', may I be so bold as to state that the best part of you obviously dripped down your mothers leg.

You are a nice retarded boy.

I don't know, though it might be fun to torture him!

Your move, bitch...

Dumbass Canucks, such as yourself, are not deserving of oxygen.

Even more ironic is that you never dispute the fact that you are a little cocksucker!

Hey, dumbass, I don't watch the Fox News channel. So, you can shove that dumbass idea right up your gaping Liberal ass!

But hey, I made $14,000 trading oil today.. blow me

Funny how the US Govt. sent me over $50,000 last year

LMFAO as I sit and look at my royalty cheques...

I prefer genuine ROLEX!

Shove it up your ass, you faux little SOB.

You're full of shit, SOB.

Jerking off not enough for you, boy?

Do you spit or swallow?

Very tasty!

Actually, I know quite a few homosexuals.

I interact on at least a weekly basis with them, and surprisingly enough, they themselves utter the words 'damn faggots' with those who tend to step out of line.

Is that the gay place to be?

Were you the blower or the blowee?

If you'd like to call me, I'm here to help you until 0330 GMT at:

Ya right, suck my dick...

I know it may be hard, but as you withdraw, it will shrink away..

Stop whining, you pathetic little prick.

I'm gonna go buy a new Stratocaster tomorrow!

You need to buy a chink watch!

I thank the Great Spirit every day for the fact that I'm not white like you.

I know enough to realize that you most likely have BO.

But, let me say this: if we were to find that something was sent into CanaDuh, and it were not checked, and then passed to the USA for bad purposes, you'd be on your knees asking the USA not to give your sorry asses the stomping that you would so rightly deserve, you stupid, fucking, pieces of shit that you are!

I don't watch your youtube crap, cartoon boy!

God 'ol SPAM

Sorry, I'm not a racist like you, Edweenie...

Hey, Chink Boy, I got a real Rolex, still ticking after 33 years.. shove it up your slant eyed ass.

Get the hell out of my country, boy, and head back to where those who appreciate little NAZI bastards such as yourself, you little faux Hispanic piece of shit.

He's a bean blower!

Stuff a burrito in it, 'Eduardo'.

FUCK CANADUH

In your case that must mean Hispanic Retard department.

Proud to be Miami and a blood relative of Abraham Lincoln

I said it before, and I say it again... Vicente Fox is a stinking piece of Mexican shit.

Keep blowing those beans out your sorry, un-american ass, boy.

Our data indicates that humanity would be better served if you were in the fields picking lettuce.

Wonder why.... could it be that the Canucky Niggah is timid, afraid...?

Damn, the Canucky Niggah didn't have a damn thing to say...

Extremely heavy emphasis on the BOY.

Actually VA facilities are quite good, but if you Canucky niggahs poke around one might find a lot of things wrong.

Fuckin' dumbass.

You are certainly an SOB, you stupid, MF'ing, liar and poseur!

WRNO FM 99.5 became Rush Radio today.
Rush mentioned it on the show, and also seemed to say that at least for a while they'd be carrying his show for 18 hours a day.

Your birth trait is that you're a MORON, dumbass.

Something for your faux Hispanic cock sucking brain to think about, eh?

Blow it out yer ass, Canuck!

All your talk comes from within the contours of your ass.

Yes, I am witty, and I am wise!

my mommy blew it out her ass II wrote

True, ain't it, little faux Hispanic BOY.. (Heavy emphasis on the BOY!)

Stuff a taco in it, Ramon!

And don't forget SAMBLA, South American Man Boy Love Association.

Mouth wide open, ready to take a load.

Difficult for moi?

After eating the taco's wouldn't they be capable of gassing themelves?

It is then my patriotic friend, you must reach in the closet, place your hands upon the weapon, and blow the cock sucking,
bean blower back into Mary's arms....

They are mere asswipes, suitable for flushing.

How many American lives were affected by the slant eyed shit throughout the entire war?

Dumbass Canucks, sure ain't Rolex wearin' respectable folk...!

Or better yet, go get yourself some IBO Cock!

Yeah, after all, you're the Queen of your drug addled world.

And that has exactly what to do with the fact that CanaDuh is a Third World Country?

Canucks need to be castrated.

Shame? Sorry, I'm not a dumbass Canuck. Blow me, boy.

Hey, buttfuck boy... try to pay attention, you little piece of non-listening excrement.

Why are the retards mostly dumbass Canucks?

Run along little Canucky dweeb.

One of my nicknames, starting around 1975 or so has been 'Raoul'

Well, now you know them, and you know me, Karl Mauritania!

Obviously you're just a retard boy who failed as a corporate manager.

Did I say it was, shit for brains?

Because you're a moron, Druggie!

Ace is doing ok!

They don't call me 'Ace' for nothing!

And you, just another retard on the short bus.

All of my DX is better than your DX no matter what I do.

Well, I cann assure most everyone here that I've done 100% of my DX'ing without the help from anyone here, and I've had a moderate amount of success.

You claim to be 'Cherokee'... I think you're just 'Wannabee'...

No need to do anything more productive than cash the checks, invest the money, do some DX'ing, and rile up the mentally ill Canucks!

Why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (1)

LOLOLOLOLOLOL... what a damn dumb cunt you are!

Now get your homo ass working on that documentation, boy!

Give it a shot queer boys, I dare ya!Very tasty!

Cocksuckers such as your self.

Hit the road, 'tard.

Toss 'em all, especially the Canucks!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (2)

Let the faggot boy prove it!

LMFAO at the f00kin faggot

Yes, I learn more and more with each passing day!

LMFAO at the pathological liar!

Lying 'tard boy, much like the other debutante, malcontent, faux boys who inhabit the lace we call RRS.

Hey, dipshit retarded one...

Have your sister come over here and blow me, boy.

Obama is a two-bit punk! Heck, he doesn't even care about his relatives who live in squalor. What a guy! He could send his brother $20 which would more than double his income, and, his brother could probably afford a 'double-wide' hut.

You dumb sand niggers (sorry, I categorize ya all this way) need to understand that you need to get your collective shit together...

Obviously another clueless Canadian Cunt.

I'm waiting for Obama to start chucking spears and promising everyone their own hut and and a $12 stipend a year.

Better naked than Marxist!

How the f00k would you know what I intended or not you worthless piece of Canadian excrement?

Tamp some cotton in it, little girl.

In all fairness, it is I who make you drool on command, dumbass.

I'll bet you use those Vise-Grip's when the gerbils get stuck, right?

You were an automatic dumbass at birth.

However, a pile of crap (such as yourself) is an idiot!

Quit crossposting, ya little queer Canuck.

"Do you realize how childish you look?"
Nope, I refuse to look in the mirror.

Take a walk, buttfuck.

Sheesh... another f00kin queer!

I ain't white, but unlike you, I dislike no one.

Come on! How can anyone be straight after free beer and sausages

You are indeed a queer, are you not?

Who will you be bunking with, Bob?

Come lick me homo boy.

Come and arrest me, cockbite.

Yep, the Great Spirit watches over us all!

You are worthless.

Yeah, go ahead, you drooling idiot.

Nope, but you're a faggot now, right?

Yer mama tossed ya because you're a homo boy, ain't that true?

Did I make any distinction with regard to country, you pedantic little cocksucker?

Blow me, faggot boy!

Fuck YOU, and fuck CanaDuh.

Now asswipe, go take your meds.

Take your meds, retard.

Humanity would be better served if 'Eduardo' were to take his shtick
to the fields and began picking lettuce.

And, 'Eddy', may I be so bold as to state that the best part of you obviously dripped down your mothers leg.

You are a nice retarded boy.

I don't know, though it might be fun to torture him!

Your move, bitch...

Dumbass Canucks, such as yourself, are not deserving of oxygen.

Even more ironic is that you never dispute the fact that you are a little cocksucker!

Hey, dumbass, I don't watch the Fox News channel. So, you can shove that dumbass idea right up your gaping Liberal ass!

But hey, I made $14,000 trading oil today.. blow me

Funny how the US Govt. sent me over $50,000 last year

LMFAO as I sit and look at my royalty cheques...

I prefer genuine ROLEX!

Shove it up your ass, you faux little SOB.

You're full of shit, SOB.

Jerking off not enough for you, boy?

Do you spit or swallow?

Very tasty!

Actually, I know quite a few homosexuals.

I interact on at least a weekly basis with them, and surprisingly enough, they themselves utter the words 'damn faggots' with those who tend to step out of line.

Is that the gay place to be?

You need to buy a chink watch!

I thank the Great Spirit every day for the fact that I'm not white like you.

I know enough to realize that you most likely have BO.

But, let me say this: if we were to find that something was sent into CanaDuh, and it were not checked, and then passed to the USA for bad purposes, you'd be on your knees asking the USA not to give your sorry asses the stomping that you would so rightly deserve, you stupid, fucking, pieces of shit that you are!

I don't watch your youtube crap, cartoon boy!

God 'ol SPAM

Sorry, I'm not a racist like you, Edweenie...

Hey, Chink Boy, I got a real Rolex, still ticking after 33 years.. shove

Proud to be Miami and a blood relative of Abraham Lincoln

I said it before, and I say it again... Vicente Fox

Keep blowing those beans out your sorry, un-american ass, boy.

Our data indicates that humanity would be better served if you were in

Wonder why.... could it be that the Canucky Niggah is timid, afraid...?

Damn, the Canucky Niggah didn't have a damn thing to say...

Extremely heavy emphasis on the BOY.

Actually VA facilities are quite good, but if you Canucky niggahs poke

You are certainly an SOB, you stupid, MF'ing, liar and poseur!

WRNO FM 99.5 became Rush Radio today.
Rush mentioned it on the show, and also seemed to say that at least for a while they'd be carrying his show for 18 hours a day.

Your birth trait is that you're a MORON, dumbass.

Something for your faux Hispanic cock sucking brain to think about, eh?

Blow it out yer ass, Canuck!

All your talk comes from within the contours of your ass.

Yes, I am witty, and I am wise!

Stuff a taco in it, Ramon!

And don't forget SAMBLA, South American Man Boy Love Association.

Mouth wide open, ready to take a load.

Difficult for moi?

After eating the taco's wouldn't they be capable of gassing themelves?

It is then my patriotic friend, you must reach in the closet,
place your hands upon the weapon, and blow the cock sucking,
bean blower back into Mary's arms....

They are mere asswipes, suitable for flushing.

How many American lives were affected by the slant eyed shit throughout the entire war?

Dumbass Canucks, sure ain't Rolex wearin' respectable folk...!

Or better yet, go get yourself some IBO Cock!

Yeah, after all, you're the Queen of your drug addled world.

And that has exactly what to do with the fact that CanaDuh is a Third World Country?

Canucks need to be castrated.

Shame? Sorry, I'm not a dumbass Canuck. Blow me, boy.

Hey, buttfuck boy... try to pay attention, you little piece of

Why are the retards mostly dumbass Canucks?

Run along little Canucky dweeb.

One of my nicknames, starting around 1975 or so has been 'Raoul'

Well, now you know them, and you know me, Karl Mauritania!

Obviously you're just a retard boy who failed as a corporate manager.

Did I say it was, shit for brains?

Because you're a moron, Druggie!

Ace is doing ok!

They don't call me 'Ace' for nothing!

And you, just another retard on the short bus.

All of my DX is better than your DX no matter what I do.

Well, I cann assure most everyone here that I've done 100% of my DX'ing without the help from anyone here, and I've had a moderate amount of success.

You claim to be 'Cherokee'... I think you're just 'Wannabee'...

No need to do anything more productive than cash the checks, invest the money, do some DX'ing, and rile up the mentally ill Canucks!

Why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (1)

Why We Were Attacked in Norway
Posted: 7/23/11 09:10 AM ET

The news about the terrorist attacks that took place yesterday in Norway kept on getting worse and worse. First, we heard that a massive bomb blast took place in the heart of Oslo, causing major destruction and chaos. Then came the news about a subsequent related attack on the island of Utøya, where a gunman had killed at least 10 people attending a youth camp of the Workers' Youth League (Arbeidernes Ungdomsfylking), which is affiliated with the governing social democratic Labor Party of Norway (Arbeiderpartiet). As if this was not horrifying enough, we later found out that at least 80 people had been murdered in the youth camp and that many of the shooting victims were children. The gunman was apprehended and the suspect has been identified as Anders Behring Breivik, who has a purported Facebook account and he has left a number of comments on political websites, which are currently being analyzed by the police. It is not clear what his motives were, whether he acted alone or as part of a group and whether he suffers from a mental illness. During the next days, we are bound to find out more, as Norway recovers from this shock and its police force conducts all the necessary investigations.
One of the key questions that arose initially was whether the terrorist attacks had been conducted by religious extremists or by domestic political extremists. The initial preliminary clues do not suggest any obvious link between the suspect Anders Behring Breivik and religious extremism. However, the comments that he allegedly made on the political website www.document.no suggest that Breivik strongly disliked multiculturalism, immigrant culture, left-wing or "Marxist" ideas, and felt that traditional Norwegian values were being threatened by multiculturalists, Muslims and left-wing politics.
Breivik's comments are quite characteristic of the growing far-right political movements in Europe, therefore it is quite possible that the motives for his terrorist acts may have been in part influenced by this right-wing extremist ideology. Breivik's dislike for left-wing politicians may also explain why he chose a youth camp of the social democratic Labor Party as a target for his attack. The tragic irony is that in many ways, right-wing extremists in Europe who promote a culture of hatred against mostly Muslim immigrants are not too dissimilar from Muslim right wing extremists, who in turn try to promote a culture of hatred against "unbelievers." Both groups strongly resist the progressive-liberal values that are represented by the center-left political parties, both groups want to replace multiculturalism and tolerance of the "other" with a more homogeneous and traditional society, and members of both groups have shown that they are willing to use violent means to achieve their goals.

One of the biggest shocks to all of us was that these attacks occurred in Norway, which is characterized by an open and peaceful society. However, if one looks at it from the perspective of religious or political right-wing extremists, Norway is exactly the kind of country that would offend such extremists. The fact that the society in Norway is tolerant, peaceful, promotes progressive-liberal values, provides strong welfare support, while maintaining a high level of quality of life must be a thorn in the flesh of right-wing extremists. This is why the response to these horrifying events has to be cautious. When I heard the Norwegian Prime Minister Stoltenberg respond to the attacks by saying "You will not destroy us, you will not destroy our democracy and our idea for a better world," I felt a great sense of relief and some pride in being a progressive-liberal European. If the ultimate goal of right-wing extremists is to undermine our core values and try to force our hand by giving up the tolerant and open societies we have built in Europe, we cannot let them win.

One of the most painful aspects of the massacre yesterday is the murder of the children. These teenagers were attending the political youth camp to promote values such as tolerance, social justice and peace. Their participation was a sign of their commitment to further improve our society, and in this sense, they are heroes similar to the firefighters and policeman who died during the September 11, 2001 attacks in the line of duty. We will mourn the victims of all these terror attacks and we can hope and pray that their families will recover from their grief. At the same time, we also need to look towards the future and work together so that we can try to prevent such attacks from happening again. Recognizing the right-wing extremist threat is just the first step. We then have to develop short-term and long-term strategies to counter this threat without sacrificing our core liberal progressive values. We owe this to the victims.

I'll be happy with two chickens in every pot . Money is a very

Since Catarina had made landfall in an area which has never, according to reliable records, experienced a tropical cyclone before, the damage was quite severe. Despite being an unprecedented event, Brazilian officials took the appropriate actions and warned the public about the approaching storm. Residents heeded the warnings and prepared for the storm by either evacuating or by riding it out in their homes. Catarina ended up destroying 1,500 homes and damaging around 40,000 others.

That would be a Category 2 hurricane... though, in the southern hemisphere, it would be an anticyclone, with reverse rotation to a northern hemisphere storm.

Not true. Bush lost more cash money ($100 bills) in Iraq than Obama has spent on most Federal programs for the needy.

Let's roll back to 1999 spending percentages.

The South Atlantic ocean had previously been hurricane free. Denying man made global warming this late in the game betrays you as a kook. Even Steve Forbes finally sees the light.

ROFLMAO

Are you actually so stupid as to think that animals consciously think about having babies, and that's why they have sex?

So when you see two dogs humping in the middle of the street, the dogs are thinking, "Rowwwrf ruff ruff rowwrf" (TRANSLATION: "Must fertilize this fine collie so she will have pups and continue the species.")

Because you'd have to be pretty fucking stupid to think that.

Part of the reason that Brazil cannot have a hurricane is because in the regiojn of Brazil most likely to receive one from the North Atlantic, a hurricane cannot survive. A hurricane requires a significant amount of Coriolis to form and maintain. Between about 10 north to 10 south, there is simply not enough Coriolis present. Big humungous T-Storm complexes, yes - but not a large scale cyclonic circulation.

And, since hurricanes actually are born off the west end of the Sahara desert in the eastern North Atlantic, and the area south of the equator in Africa has no similar counterpart or currents, Brazil at any location is very unlikely to receive a hurricane. However, that was then; this is now.

In fact, most Republican leaders KNOW that global warming is about 120% human-induced. When it becomes politically expedient to admit it, they will.

An anticyclone is technically something that rotates in reverse to what the normal Coriolis would force it to do. In the Northern Hemisphere, an anticyclone would rotate clockwise. In the Southern Hemisphere, a regular cyclone would normally rotate clockwise, because that is what the Coriolis "force" would compel it to do. An anticyclone would rotate CCW in the SH.

I would also add that, except for the rare anticyclonic tornado (about <1% of all twisters), anticyclones are almost universally very gentle and benign in terms of wind and circulation (think high pressure area). The worst things they bring are excessive heat or cold.

It was around 200 TONS of 100 dollar bills and something tells me it wasn't lost at all. Nobody loses 200 tons worth of money. It probably got funneled to the right people to make sure the war continued unabated.

That's an interesting observation since the wars in both Iraq and Afghanistan were under a trillion. Obamacare is almost that by itself.

Everybody has a different figure for this, depending on their political position. It did nothing to lower medical costs, but really didn't do much to raise medical costs either - only changing how we buy insurance.

So let's see,

Spending 32.65% of the GDP

Meanwhile we increase the debt by 1.34% of the GDP each year.

So tell me, how long until we are bankrupt?

It wasn't a healthcare plan, as you noted it was mostly insurance reform.
The costs came during the debates (what there were on it....).

Yeah.

If you take over the controls of an aircraft that someone has put into a steep dive, you can't just yank the controls back to level it off, either.

Not only that, but the "whirlpool" that water makes going down a drain rotates in the opposite direction in the southern hemisphere, as it does in the northern hemisphere ... oxygen molecules are very slightly magnetic, as is water ... and, probably has some affect on this phenomenon.

Well, you can, but if the aircraft has electronic over-rides, it will only apply the correction in relation to what the plane can handle ... now, in fighter/military aircraft, that can be VERY dramatic, possibly creating g-forces which will black out the pilot ...

If structural design limits were allowed to be ignored, the plane/aircraft would simply begin losing pieces of itself, or worse.

In a spin, the first thing to do is put your nose down to gain some airspeed, so you have some control. (Some planes recover well from spins, others don't).

On, and near the Equator, that water flows counterclockwise, and or, clockwise, or doesn't rotate at all.Sometimes it also does so in the Northern Hemisphere and the Southern Hemisphere.It isn't 'etched in stone', perse.

Not so. The Coriolis effect is mathematically VERY tiny, and on anything less than meso-scale and larger circulation (thunderstorm size and upward) operating over long periods of time (severfal hours and longer) it is not going to to have an appreciable effect, even at the poles. It can be demonstrated in a very large circular pool of water, deionized helpful, if one watches for several hours or days - but in an ordinary drain or toilet, where the forces of friction, bowl shape, drain configuration, surface tension and simple time greatly exceed that of the Coriolis, the Coriolis will have no observable effect.

I can't speak specifically to the Coriolis effect, but I CAN verify that, at least toilets, of the standard US variety, do indeed drain in the opposite way south of the equator. At places near the equator, there is no 'swirl' at all, they drain straight down. This is a personal observation, using only US brands of toilets to keep the number of variables at a minimum.

It's another phenomenon. The Coriolis effect is extremely tiny compared to virtualy every other possible force that acts on the water.

From the article I cited:

"Compared to the rotations that one usually sees (tires on a travelling automobile, a compact disc playing music, or a draining sink), the rotation of the Earth is very small: only one rotation per day. The water in a sink might make a rotation in a few seconds and so have a rotation rate ten thousand times higher than that of the Earth. It should not be surprising, therefore, to learn that the Coriolis force is orders of magnitude smaller than any of the forces involved in these everyday spinning things. The Coriolis force is so small, that it plays no role in determining the direction of rotation of a draining sink anymore than it does the direction of a spinning CD.

The direction of rotation of a draining sink is determined by the way it was filled, or by vortices introduced while washing. The magnitude of these rotations may be small, but they are nevertheless gargantuan by comparison to the rotation of the Earth. I decided to include a picture of a draining sink, and the first one I tried in my house was found to drain clockwise (the opposite of what the silly assertions would have it do here in the northern hemisphere). This direction was determined entirely by the way the tap filled the sink. The direction of rotation of a draining toilet is determined by the way the water just under the rim is squirted into the bowl when it is flushed."

dxAce was in the U.S.Navy, perhaps he knows something about that.

I read about it in a book many Moons ago.

I mean do you really think that the fact that the U.S. economy was in a steep decline when Obama took office and it cannot be reversed just by flicking a switch: do you think that that is valid or not?

- Everybody has a different figure for this,

- It did nothing to lower medical costs,
- but really didn't do much to raise medical
- costs either
- only changing how we buy insurance.

Actually for the ~80% who where 'Insured' before Obama-Care : In general it does not change the way they buy their 'insurance'.

However, for the ~20% who where NOT 'Insured' before Obama-Care : In general it does Force them to Buy 'Insurance' or be Taxed -aka- the Coercion {Force} of Taxes.

The Obama-Regime has given so many so many Obama-Care 'exemptions' to Big Businesses {Mega-Employers like Wal*Mart and McDonald's} with tens and hundreds of thousands of employees; that the Employers Mandates do not exist for many/most.

So Obama-Care 'Targets' the Individual Un-Insured
Employee with a Mandate to be 'Insured' or Taxed.

Yes, I believe that the decline actually started at the end of the Clinton administration with the dot.com industry going bust and the regulations being eased on the housing and financial markets and the Democrats' dream of new home ownership. Clinton wanted 8 million new home owners. Bush continued that dream with a desire for 5.5 million on his watch. Oversight went in the toilet, we had 9/11, two wars, an unfunded mandate on Medicare Part D, etc.

We also had a Democratically controlled House and Senate since the 2006 elections and lack of oversight on Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, Obama campaigning that Afghanistan was the "right" war and a continuation of the many of the same policies that existed under Bush. The economy was in the toilet, jobs were going away and Obama was concentrating on passing his historic healthcare bill (insurance reform) rather than to focus on the other two problems.

Yes, I believe those things. I also believe that, sometime, Obama needs to stand up and be counted rather than to continue to blame things on Bush.

The Point Being here is that if you want to Blame Bush for Everything Pre-Obama:
Then Honesty Requires you to include both Pelosi and Reid in the Blame Game Too !

Prez-A-Duntz can not Sign Laws that Both

How about:

07/25/2011 14,535,921,315,199
09/30/2010 13,561,623,030,891.79

09/30/2007 9,007,653,372,262.48
09/30/2006 8,506,973,899,215.23
09/30/2005 7,932,709,661,723.50
09/30/2004 7,379,052,696,330.32

09/30/2000 5,674,178,209,886.86

We could use the 2000 fiscal year end and start Bush with $5.7T and ending with $10.1T. Now Obama is at $14.5T after only 2.5 years. Let's see that is Bush at $4.4T in 8 years and Obama at $4.4T in less than 3. Got it. Thanks.

Yea, but how does that change the point he's pushing the stick forward and increasing the rate of dive?

How long until you hit max V, and start ripping parts of the plane off because the dive is too steep?

No back pedal, I was not part of the earlier conversation, and I also don't accept that either analogy applies.

But the USAF did teach me how to get out of spins in T37 aircraft, and I'd rather talk about that than which direction Tweedledee and Tweedledum have led us in.

Doesn't alter the fact that you changed the conditions.

"If you take over the controls of an aircraft that someone has put into a steep dive,..."

Is it your contention that every dive, specifically steep ones, are spins?

If not, then you are moving the goal post. Doesn't matter whether you set it up, you are the one moving it now.

they are in many cases, insane, or have a severe brain malformation, where complex subjects, cannot be properly processed. they are simply missing that capability, because their brains are malformed.

around 22.7 Million.

> And George W . Bush created ZERO during his first > term ???

Actually there was a slight lose, but given the economic upsets that occurred during his first term, holding even was doing pretty good. What with the DOT com bubble burst and 9/11.

Of course, I note despite this and the later housing and sub-prime loan collapse he still ended up with more jobs after his Presidency that he started with.

> Are these figures official or fake ?

They are close enough to be basically true for most purposes, some slight errors due to rounding but nothing drastic.

Plenty of Hangings occur in Jails/Prisons every year in the USA most are called 'Suicides' : When in-fact many so called 'Suicides' are Inflected {Forced-On} on the Victims by others.

Prisoner Creates Problem
Prisoner is Removed from the general population Prisoner is place Alone in a cell

How is impairment proved? I can pass any skill test. I can pass any cognitive test. The only way "impairment" can even be "implied" is by chemical testing methods. Coffee is more debilitating than the dog-weed I smoke.

My only contact with police is when I get a speeding ticket. Even then, they never suspect me of inebriation. Cali has millions of pot-heads driving around every day. You can't bust all of them.

For ships at sea hoping to effect a great circle course (the shortest distance between two points), the course would appear as an arc on any projection map other than a globe or specialized polar projection. Going eastward, this would appear as a clockwise arc. It is probable that at this global scale, Coriolis would alter the current enough to steer the boat too far south.

No, this is accurate. Unde rnormal natural conditions, without the added CO2 released by 200 years of heavy fossil fuel buring, the eartgh's climate would most probably be slowly cooling at this point, about 20% of the rate at which it is now heating. 20% + 100% = 120%.
Even NASA and several other scientific bodies describe it this exact way.

I am a scientist. I don't need to take another math class. I know how numbers are expressed. I also know how and why climate change is occuring. Here is a little lesson if you care to actually read acquired knowledge instead of repeat paranoid conservative talking points:

Same as above. You can just broadbrush and whitewash everything like your corporate oil masters, or you can crunch actual numbers and make actual measurements, like scientists.

Over here, if you are mowing your lawn and if you step in your house for a cold drink, your lawnmower might NOT still be there when you step outside.
Somebody stold 140 wheels off of 35 cars at Heritage auto dealership in the Dallas/Fort Worth area.

I just now got back home from the Lowe's store, I bought $125.00 worth of 2''x4''x 8's and some boards to build some heavy duty shelves for the room (junk room) with the concrete floor.I am Glad my big old 1983 Dodge van was still sitting in the Lowe's store parking lot.

Normally "Impairment" {the Ability to Walk

Standardized Field Sobriety Test that is given by a Trained LEO.

The harm is manifold...

* It's hard for others to follow/find/search for a particular thread if the title keeps changing.

* There is nothing to quote/respond to if your main point/response is in the header.

For example, in your changed header, you said "Get a real news reader". As it is in the title, there is no way to -directly- quote you or respond to you.

Spin and tap dance all you want, but it's STILL bad netiqutte.

BTW, I am using Thunderbird as a news reader and AFAIK, it is "real".

Without his teleprompter, Prezuhdink Omaumau would be saying

Berliner Pfannkuchen

A Central European or German doughnut is called the Berliner Pfannkuchen, also known as a Bismark. It is commonly a jam filled doughnut, coated with icing or powered sugar. Berliners are also made with a chocolate or custard filling, or no filling at all.

The first part of a sobriety exam is when you roll down the window and start interacting with the Storm Trooper. If you pass that phase dancing with a ball point pen is not required. Cops don't care about you if you aren't making them work harder.

What problems? I have arthritis and a damaged liver, pretty typical for someone my age with my history. Pain management and high anxiety are my only "problems", both are well controlled. You are having way more difficulty than I am.

Hey! That fault runs about 10 miles North of here and hasn't moved since 1857. It has about 20 feet of energy stored up (my house is supposed to move about 4" closer to Bruce Jensen's house every year). If it rips it'll cause $100B in damage easy.

64? Oh, for it to be that here... :( The coldest it's been here in a couple months is something like 75 (23C), and that was at night during a rainstorm.
It rarely reaches 100 here, because of offshore convection, but 95 has been pretty much the average since late May. Currently 80 degrees at 5:30 AM.

It's been a few years, but if IIRC, the Andersen AFB pancit had bits of pork, chicken (I think), shrimp, scrambled egg, green pepper, onions, and a lime slice ... all on a bed of medium-thick rice noodles and fried rice. It was sooooooooo good!

the Siberian crocodile is not the first exotic creature to have fun in Russian waters. In early June, fishermen caught a couple of piranhas, native to Latin America, in the countryï¿½s south.

While locals are blaming global warming, scientists say the killer fish could have been released into the river by a disgruntled owner.

[ain't it hard to be humble when you're perfect in every way?]

I was born with a birth defect, shunned by my parents, grew up on the streets without an education.

I managed to bluff my way blindly through life, leaving a couple kids in my wake. The only time I've had any money was when my POS father died. In a moment of lucidity I bought a house.

Now I'm all diagnosed and getting treatment, but way too far gone to turn into a human at this late stage of the game. I will glide on my equity to an anonymous death. Just another freak who slipped though the cracks.

It would be fun to take a few million of you zombies with me, but no need now; the world is destroying itself nicely. I worship Megadeth.

At least I know who my boss is.

I'll give you $50 right now. I have a working copy of that radio but part of the chrome frame on the front is missing. It has a very scary "turret" tuner arrangement, but mine cleaned up nicely with some rubbing. I'd make sure all the turret contacts are clean. Do no spray anything into an old radio; use Q-Tips and flux brushes.

Crocodiles look a little differently than Alligators.We have Alligators around here.A guy in Penns Woods (Pennsylvania, to the people who don't know) stepped out to get his morning newspaper, it was laying between two parked cars on the street.He reached down for his newspaper, he was stareing at an Alligator.

4696. OT New NASA Data Blow Gaping Hole In Global Warming Alarmism

NASA satellite data from the years 2000 through 2011 show the Earth's atmosphere is allowing far more heat to be released into space than alarmist computer models have predicted, reports a new study in the peer-reviewed science journal Remote Sensing. The study indicates far less future global warming will occur than United Nations computer models have predicted, and supports prior studies indicating increases in atmospheric carbon dioxide trap far less heat than alarmists have claimed.

Crazy Luke Woodham (what he did about fourteen years ago, I think it was about fourteen years ago) is asking for clemency.
Missy Sippy Governor Haly Barbour (is Barbour a Frog name? I think so) said, I would be flabbergasted if the parole board reccomended clemency.

You could call it "some kind of rain event." What it was was a full months rain in a matter of a few hours. We were out IN that carp.. places on the freeway had as much as 10" deep rivers as we were on our way into the city. Although, this little gullywasher wasn't near as bad as one we had back in 2002, where dozens were killed by drowning and/or electrocution in several villages north of Seoul (which, BTW, is where the majority of the damage occurred this time also.) On our way home, we had to drive through the remnants of a mudslide that covered the southbound lanes of the freeway with flotsam and mire for more than a kilometer. It would have been much worse, but the guard rail kept most of the large stuff (there was someone's storage shed slammed against it) from reaching the freeway.

The static band of showers ran pretty much west to east in an area on the north end of Asan Bay (south of Seoul) into the southernmost part of the DPRK, and it just stayed there dumping out trillions of gallons of water for most of the day. Meanwhile, here in Pyeongtaek, we got only a fraction as much rain during the same time, about 3".

4731. Racketeering Charges against SEIU; What Does Liberal Fascist 0baMa0 Know?

United States District Judge Claude Hilton, acting in the eastern district of Virginia, has ruled that the French-based food service and facilities management company Sodexo can proceed with an extortion claim against the Service Employees International Union (SEIU).

The SEIU, which has strong ties to the Obama administration, has been accused of using ties to the federal government to harass companies such as Sodexo. The alleged methods include using regulatory or government action to pressure or embarrass the company or its employees.

As shown by recent action taken by the National Labor Relations Board, including proposed rules to steamroll union organizing over company opposition and the fight to kill non-union jobs created by Boeing, the administration is not adverse to flexing it’s union muscles at the federal level.

Sodexo, which operates as a contractor in government facilities, military bases, schools and hospitals, says that the SEIU tried to “extort [the company] by threatening financial damage unless [it] cave[d] into its demands. The SEIU's campaign was designed to illegally threaten [the] company.”

Sedexo vowed to continue to “challenge the SEIU's illegal behavior until it ends,” says a statement released by the company.

The ruling means that the company can continue to pursue a civil case to stop the SEIU from using illegal tactics such as “blackmail, vandalism, trespassing, harassment and lobbying law violations, which were designed to steer government and private contracts away from Sodexo in order to damage the Company's business,” says the company.

The SEIU responded by saying Sodexo’s claims were “baseless.”

“The ruling means that SEIU will have an opportunity to prove the facts about our organization, our members, and our work regarding Sodexo,” said a statement released by the SEIU.

The Blog of the Legal Times says that the union has been accused “of carrying out a negative publicity campaign in order to strong-arm exclusive access to Sodexo’s non-union employees. Sodexo claimed the union was attempting to unlawfully unionize employees and increase revenue in violation of the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act.”

According to the National Legal and Policy Center only 18,000 of the company's 98,000 qualified employees have chosen to join the SEIU. In retaliation, says the NLPC, the union has carried out a campaign of intimidation that includes:

threw plastic roaches onto food at a high-profile event catered by Sodexo;
scared hospital patients by insinuating that Sodexo food contained bugs, rat droppings, mold and flies;
sneaked into elementary schools to avoid security; violated lobbying laws to steer business away from the company; and threatened Sodexo USA employees with public exposure of alleged wrongdoing.

The NLPC also revealed that the union may be operating from an "internal SEIU monograph, titled Contract Campaign Manual. The monograph serves as a veritable bible for waging guerrilla warfare against recalcitrant employers. The Washington, D.C.-based free-market think tank, the Competitive Enterprise Institute, obtained a copy from the Public Access to Court Electronic Records (PACER) system."

The NLPC says that manual encourages "jeopardizing relationships between the employer and lenders, investors, stockholders, customers, clients, patients, tenants, politicians, or others on whom the employer depends for funds.: The manual also recommends applying legal and, most telling "regulatory pressure" in order to ""threaten the employer with costly action by government agencies or the courts."

Where would the regulatory pressure or government action come from? The SEIU reportedly spent $60 million electing Barack Obama.

The manual, says the NLPC, goes on to encourage organizers to personally harass board members, shareholders and management officials with "dirt" in order to further facilitate union organizing at a target company.

On July 1st the Competitive Enterprise Institute published the SEIU's plan "to launch a national campaign of economic strong-arming and sabotage. Their plan envisions mortgage and student loan strikes and bank boycotts. Also contemplated are acts of harassment and intimidation directed against bank officials, corporate heads and public officials deemed to be enemies of the people."

So if indeed the SEIU has been guilty of illegal activities such as using government influence to threaten or intimidate companies or individuals, the question is how much does the Obama administration know and how high does it go?

With Global Warming multiply by 10. A one foot rise in sea level makes you lose 10' of coastline. A hundred year flood happens once or twice every decade.

Using this combo, the old HE-10, 8 tubes, sort of like a bigger brother of the S-38. With a good ground and the Terk loop, I am pulling in some really great AM DX. I am only a mile from the ocean, Atlantic coast, and have yet to hear some European stations. Did pick up the big blowtorch from Saudi Arabia on 1521. Trying to get all the states east of the MS, so far doing pretty well. I could use my newer portables, but going old school is fun, brings back the fun in DX'ing.

That "study" not only has Forbes inaccurately written all over it - it not only is PACKED full of code words and buzzwords designed to make conservative oil lackies foam at the mouth like rabid muskrats in heat - it not only would instantaneously overturn 150 years' worth of hard data and peer-reviewed science - but it has NEVER been peer reviewed and has not yet passed any kind of muster with other scientists. If it is true (believe me, nobody wishes it were true more than me), the truth wil reveal itself as it is tested repeatedly and examined throughly over the next couple of years by REAL scientists and not highly biased "journalists" and fools. We'll see.

Any run of the mill tube radio front-end has better specs than most solid state radios. That Lafayette ran circles around the Halli. Great piece of design.

I searched the Forbes site; they're already figuring out how to capitalize on climate chaos. No sign of the "leaky greenhouse" theory...

Mean Mike; ExxonMobil and the Koch Brothers are spending billions on climate science obfuscators, because they know the world is full of idiots who'll believe anything that is fed to them by the propaganda machine. The most liberating thing I ever saw was a cartoon of all the Disney characters having an orgy. It opened my mind to the fact that all is phony and that nothing is sacred.

Do you want to give up your liberty? It's easy; just start believing in faith based media pablum. It's everywhere. You really have to work hard not to get brainwashed. If you pretend you're not being brainwashed then they really have you.

Question authority.

Unions are thuggish, corrupt, greedy, racketeering, criminal cabals that routinely inflict violence on anyone who tries to rein in reach and scope...

It's why the Teamster's had some eight straight "leaders" convicted of felony corruption/bribery charges and why union "strikes" invaribly devolve into abject brutality.

Reagan had the right idea when he shitcanned those greedy PATCO assholes...

Now, American heroes like Governor Walker, Governor Snyder and the like have taken up that mantle...

Godspeed to them.

That's because a ham sandwich is more productive and more intelligent than the average union thug.

ARLP030 Propagation de K7RA

Sunspot activity dipped over this past week, but now is on its way back up.

On July 20, five sunspot groups were visible, but on July 21, only groups 1251, 1254 and 1259 remained. On July 24, new sunspot group 1260 appeared, and the next day 1251 disappeared. On July 26 groups 1254 and 1259 went away, and new sunspot group 1261 arrived. The next day another new group, 1262 appeared, and on July 28 two new sunspot groups, 1263 and 1264 appeared. On July 28 the total area of visible sunspots was greater than it has been since the end of May.

Average daily sunspot numbers for the week July 21-27 declined nearly 47 points, a little over 50 percent, to 45.6. Average daily solar flux declined over 6 points to 91.8.

The latest forecast has been revised upward for solar activity higher than was reported in this week's ARRL Letter. The forecast shows predicted solar flux at 110 on July 29 through August 4, 100 on August 5, 95 on August 6-7, 98 on August 8, and 100 on August 9-16. It also shows planetary A index at 5 on July 29-30, 12 on July 31 through August 1, 7 on August 2, 5 on August 3-4 followed by 12 again on August 5-7, and 8 on August 8-11.

Geophysical Institute Prague predicts quiet conditions on July 29, quiet to unsettled July 30, unsettled July 31 and August 1, then quiet to unsettled August 2 and quiet again on August 3-4.

Kent Reinke, KL1V reports some interesting VHF propagation on Thursday, July 28. He writes: "I live in Valdez, Alaska, and today I had a very strange opening while I was driving home from Dawson City Yukon. I was 30 miles northwest of Tok Alaska on the 'Top of the world highway' and while trying to pick up a local FM station from Tok I was surprised to hear several stations and they were full quieting with slow fade and after listening to them a few minutes I found out they were all from Edmonton Alberta, which is a distance of about 1235 miles. There are several mountain ranges between where I was and Edmonton. The stations sounded like I was in downtown Edmonton between the fades. I only had my 2 meter radio with a mag mount antenna but I did try a few calls on 146.52 simplex but no one heard me. The opening lasted 45 minutes and I was not sure if it was ducting or sporadic E. Next time I will have the 6 meter along".

Thanks, Kent. Very interesting.

Bear Carson, AC7HI lives in Spokane in eastern Washington State and wrote to ask about a "blackout" of radio signals he noticed recently. I sent his message to Randy Crews, W7TJ, who lives about 8 miles southeast of AC7HI. Randy had these comments:

"You know if I could pick one month out of the year that I believe is the worst for propagation in the Pacific Northwest, it would be July. Not so much QRN/Static, but flat East/West Propagation and high summer D-layer absorption.

There have been exceptions over the years, however July seems to always be the low point of the Summer. Recently I noticed that all HF propagation has really been down in the past few days even in spite of increasing solar flux and sunspots plus a quiet geomagnetic field, low dynamic pressure and solar wind plus magnetic field oriented north, and small auroral ovals.

The big reason I can see is high X-ray flux, which will negate all the propagation positives just mentioned. What I noticed was 4 months of just stellar propagation starting in mid February of this year and going until about mid June.

Recently two DXpeditions, ST0R and VK9HR have been extremely difficult to copy. The VK9 Group is on an island surrounded by salt water and compared to the T31A group in April from Canton Island, their signal on all bands has really been marginal. With the recent increase of solar flux they should be S-9 all the time. So I would attribute things to the lower solar flux vs. what we observed this last spring, high D level absorption, and very high levels of X Ray Flux. I believe that in spite of all the satellites, scientific equipment etc, propagation is still immensely complex".

Thanks, Randy!

Often we get email from non-hams who heard some piece of contemporary folklore about threats to Earth from giant solar flares or mysterious planets. A recent article on Space.com covers this well. Thanks to N7SO for this. Read it at http://i.space.com/12194-comet-elenin-planet-nibiru-doomsday-2012.html.

Estimated planetary A indices were 12, 10, 8, 4, 12, 5, and 4, with a mean of 7.9. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 10, 10, 6, 3, 10, 5, and 2, with a mean of 6.6.

Strong Solar Flare: A strong M9.3 Solar Flare took place at 02:09 UTC Early Saturday. ...

Solar Update / Three Big Spots: Solar activity has been fairly low heading into Friday with only C-Class activity taking place mainly around large sunspots 1260 and 1261. Sunspot 1263 located towards the eastern limb is a very large sunspot group, but is not yet magnetically complex. There will remain the chance for C-Class flares and perhaps another M-Class event throughout the weekend.

I always liked Julie Andrews.

A dude out in the middle of the street a few minutes ago.He was jogging up and down the street and skipping a rope at the same time.I reckon he is training for the next Jerk Off contests.

I have three old vintage Skip Ropes, I bought them at Goodwill many years ago.One of them has ball bearings (sort of like ball bearings in the front wheels of bicycles) in the handles.Another one was made by Everlast Sportings goods company.You won't get me to skipping any ropes! I would fall down every time, as clumsy as I am.

4797. Latest Liberty Net via WB4AIO

http://3950.net/2011/07/liberty-net-july-23-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE LIBERTY NET began in 1974 as a forum for the free discussion of important ideas for the future of our civilization ï¿½ ideas that, even then, were subject to censorship by the self-appointed ï¿½gatekeepersï¿½ of the corporate media.

For 37 years, itï¿½s provided a voice for amateur radio operators who werenï¿½t afraid to exercise their inherent rights of free speech and free thought.

Here are a few of my notes from the most recent session of this amazing net:

ï¿½ Since the politicians and bankers have utterly bled their victims (thatï¿½s us) dry with their ï¿½debtï¿½ scam, there is now only one alternative open to all parties: default. But on what terms? The only just terms would be these: The politicians get lost and the bankers get arrested. (11 minutes)

ï¿½ Statistics (and our eyes) show us that the underclass in this country is increasingly obese. Why should the rest of us subsidize that? (29 minutes)

ï¿½ When we finally get to the point that every dollar we earn must be taxed away from us just to pay interest to the bankers, we will finally have reached the Communist ideal in which everything is owned by the Overlords, who might just graciously allow us a few crumbs of bread to eat, _if_ we are especially good workers. (39 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is Rupert Murdoch involved in bankrolling an effort to alter US anti-bribery laws? (1 hour 40 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is there more pharmaceutical freedom in Mexico, of all places, than in the US? And why is there so much drug-pushing on US television? And why are the pushed drugs ï¿½ which have so many side effects that almost as many ads are devoted to class action lawsuits against the drug-makers ï¿½ approved by the FDA, when that same agency outlaws simple herbs and vitamins? (1 hour 54 minutes)

ï¿½ Was the recent atrocity in Norway a false flag attack? Itï¿½s interesting that the alleged attacker expressed support for Israel and Zionism, that Norway has recently been a supporter of a Palestinian state, and that one of the banners carried by the murdered students said ï¿½Boycott Israel.ï¿½ Yet the major media are almost continuously trying to ï¿½linkï¿½ the killer to anti-Israel groups. (2 hours 41 minutes)

ï¿½ With the rise of privatized prisons, the oligarchs have figured out a nearly perfect way to profit handsomely from the the decline of society that they themselves have caused. Private prisons also give the oligarchsï¿½ managerial class a powerful monetary incentive to incarcerate more and more people, many of whom will be political dissidents innocent of any real crime. (3 hours 14 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to these Liberty Net recordings at home, at work, in your car, or while hiking or jogging with your portable mp3 player. And remember N2SAGï¿½s live feed during Net times that lets you hear the Liberty Net via multiple receivers ï¿½ and chat too.

Remember that all our Internet adjuncts are intended just to enhance the real purpose of the net, which is live and free communication between amateur operators. So please check in to the Liberty Net every Saturday night, usually to be found somewhere in that part of 75 meters above 3950 kHz ï¿½ we have to be flexible to evade jammers and intruders ï¿½ starting at 10PM Eastern Time. Once heard, the sound of W1WCRï¿½s distinctive and powerful signal is unmistakable and youï¿½ll have no trouble finding us and checking in.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio, and to all of you for checking in!

Um, self-preservation because he is involved with bribery? Or, to put it more simply, IMHO Murdoch is S-C-U-M.

> And why is there so much drug-pushing on US television?

Another easy one to answer. Lots of drug ads because the baby boomers are turning 65 - with all the medical issues that brings. A graph of the number of baby boomers looks like a rabbit going through a snake.

So? The alleged attacker also claims to be a Christian. Christ condones murdering innocent children? I thought the operative Christian phrase was "Thou shalt not kill".

Once again, Ray shoots himself in the foot with his own link...

"According to The Guardian, Jean-Pascal van Ypersele, vice-chair of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) and science historian Naomi Oreskes make the case that the "attacks on climate science that were made ahead of the Copenhagen climate change summit were 'organised' to undermine efforts to tackle global warming and mirror the earlier tactics of the tobacco industry".[123] Noting the initial media circus that occurred when the story first broke, Oreskes and Erik Conway, in an article about the history of climate change denial, observed that in the aftermath of the "climategate" investigations,

"the vindication of the climate scientists has received very little coverage at all. Vindication is not as sexy as accusation, and many people are still suspicious. After all, some of those emails, taken out of context, sounded damning. But what they show is that climate scientists are frustrated, because for two decades they have been under attack."[124]

Bill Royce, head of the European practice on energy, environment and climate change at Burson-Marsteller, also observed what appeared to be an organized effort to discredit climate science. Royce described

"climategate" as "a sustained and coordinated campaign" aimed at undermining the credibility of the science, and disproportionate reporting of the original story "widely amplified by climate deniers", with much less coverage of reports that had cleared the scientists.[125]

Journalist Curtis Brainard of the Columbia Journalism Review criticised newspapers and magazines for failing to give prominent coverage to the findings of the review panels, and said that "readers need to understand that while there is plenty of room to improve the research and communications process, its fundamental tenets remain as solid as ever."[126] CNN media critic Howard Kurtz expressed similar sentiments.[127]"

I have to agree on one point. The idiot climate deniers are not "conservatives". In fact, I haven't seen a real conservative in years.

This is ExxonMobil, the most profitable God mocking enterprise in history, fighting for even more market share, even if it means destroying the habitability of the earth.

MIT meteorology prof Richard Lindzen discusses global warming
November 27, 2010
Article Image

Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) meteorology professor Richard Lindzen presented a talk titled ï¿½Alarming Global Warming: Is Skepticism Justified?ï¿½ on Nov. 11 in York College's Collegiate Performing Arts Center.

Click here to view Parts 1, 2 and 3 of Lindzenï¿½s talk courtesy of the Pennsylvania Cable Network (PCN). The videos on Vimeo will be available until Dec. 10. (His presentation is also attached.)

Lindzen received his A.B., S.M. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University. The first degree was in physics; the last two were in applied mathematics. His thesis on the interactions of ozone chemistry, radiative transfer, and dynamics in the middle atmosphere brought him into the atmospheric sciences, where he continues to work and teach. He was a postdoctoral fellow at both the Universities of Washington and Oslo, and a research scientist at the National Center for Atmospheric Research.

Lindzen taught at the University of Chicago before moving to Harvard University, where he held the Burden Chair in dynamic meteorology and served as director of the Center for Earth and Planetary Physics. Since 1983, he has been the Alfred P. Sloan Professor of Meteorology at MIT. He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences, and the Norwegian Academy of Science and Letters, and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Geophysical Union, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the American Meteorological Society (AMS).

Lindzen is a recipient of the Macelwane medal of the American Geophysical Union, and of the Meisinger and Charney Awards of the AMS. He was the 1997 AMS Haurwitz Lecturer. In 2006, he received the Leo Prize from the Walin Foundation in Goteborg, Sweden. He has been a Japanese Society for the Promotion of Science Fellow at Kyushu University; a Vikram Amblal Sarabhai Professor at the Physical Research Laboratory, Ahmedabad, India; a Lady Davis Visiting Professorship at The Hebrew University; a Sackler Visiting Professor at Tel Aviv University; a Landsdowne Lecturer at the University of Victoria; and a National University Lecturer at the University of Hokkaido.

Lindzen is the coauthor of a monograph, "Atmospheric Tides"; the author of "Dynamics in Atmospheric Physics;" a coeditor of "The Atmosphere - A Challenge: The Scientific Work of Jule Gregory Charney;" and the author or coauthor of over 200 papers in the scientific literature. He has served on numerous panels of the National Research Council, the Council of the American Meteorological Society, and the Corporation of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. He has also been a consultant to the Global Modeling and Simulation Group at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, and a Distinguished Visiting Scientist at California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Listen to his thoughts as he is interviewed by the BBCï¿½s World Service for a series titled One Planet.

Scientific Smackdown: Skeptics Voted The Clear Winners Against Global Warming Believers in Heated NYC Debate
March 16, 2007

Posted By Marc Morano ï¿½ 8:45 AM ET ï¿½ Marc_Morano@EPW.Senate.gov

Just days before former Vice President Al Goreï¿½s scheduled visit to testify about global warming before the U.S. Senate Committee on Environment & Public Works, a high profile climate debate between prominent scientists Wednesday evening ended with global warming skeptics being voted the clear winner by a tough New York City before an audience of hundreds of people.

Before the start of the nearly two hour debate the audience polled 57.3% to 29.9% in favor of believing that Global Warming was a ï¿½crisisï¿½, but following the debate the numbers completely flipped to 46.2% to 42.2% in favor of the skeptical point of view. The audience also found humor at the expense of former Vice President Goreï¿½s reportedly excessive home energy use.

After the stunning victory, one of the scientists on the side promoting the belief in a climate "crisis" appeared to concede defeat by noting his debate team was ï¿½pretty dull" and at "a sharp disadvantage" against the skeptics. ScientificAmerican.comï¿½s blog agreed, saying the believers in a man-made climate catastrophe ï¿½seemed underarmed for the debate and, not surprising, it swung against them."

The New York City audience laughed as Gore became the butt of humor during the debate.

"What we see in this is an enormous danger for politicians in terms of their hypocrisy. Iï¿½m not going to say anything about Al Gore and his house. But it is a very serious point," quipped University of London emeritus professor Philip Stott to laughter from the audience.

The audience also applauded a call by novelist Michael Crichton to stop the hypocrisy of environmentalists and Hollywood liberals by enacting a ban on private jet travel.

"Letï¿½s have the NRDC (Natural Resources Defense Council), the Sierra Club and Greenpeace make it a rule that all of their members, cannot fly on private jets. They must get their houses off the [power] grid. They must live in the way that theyï¿½re telling everyone else to live. And if they wonï¿½t do that, why should we? And why should we take them seriously?" Crichton said to applause audience. (For more debate quotes see bottom of article)

The debate was sponsored by the Oxford-style debating group Intelligence Squared and featured such prominent man-made global warming skeptics as MIT scientist Richard Lindzen, the University of London emeritus professor of biogeography Philip Stott and Physician turned Novelist/filmmaker Michael Crichton on one side.

The scientists arguing for a climate ï¿½crisisï¿½ were NASA scientist Gavin Schmidt, meteorologist Richard C.J. Somerville of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography and Brenda Ekwurzel of the Union of Concerned Scientists. The event, which was moderated by New York Public Radioï¿½s Brian Lehrer, debated the proposition: "Global warming is not a crisis.ï¿½

Skeptics Dramatically Convinced Audience

The skeptics achieved the vote victory despite facing an audience that had voted 57% in favor of the belief that mankind has created a climate "crisis" moments before the debate began.

But by the end of the debate, the audience dramatically reversed themselves and became convinced by the arguments presented by the skeptical scientists. At the conclusion, the audience voted for the views of the skeptics by a margin of 46.2% to 42.2%. Skeptical audience members grew from a pre-debate low of 29.9% to a post debate high of 46.2% -- a jump of nearly 17 percentage points. [Link to official audience voting results]

Scientist Concedes Debate To Skeptics

NASAï¿½s Gavin Schmidt, one of the scientists debating for the notion of a man-made global warming "crisis" conceded after the debate that his side was ï¿½pretty dullï¿½ and was at "a sharp disadvantage." Schmidt made the comments in a March 15 blog posting at RealClimate.org.

"ï¿½I'm afraid the actual audience (who by temperament I'd say were split roughly half/half on the question) were apparently more convinced by the entertaining narratives from [Novelist Michael] Crichton and [UKï¿½s Philip] Stott (not so sure about Lindzen) than they were by our drier fare. Entertainment-wise it's hard to blame them. Crichton is extremely polished and Stott has a touch of the revivalist preacher about him. Comparatively, we were pretty dull," Schmidt wrote.

ï¿½Advantage: Climate Contrariansï¿½

The ScientificAmerican.comï¿½s blog also declared the global warming skeptics the clear winner of the debate in a March 15 post titled: "Debate Skills? Advantage: Climate Contrarians."

"The proponents [of a climate crisis] seemed underarmed for the debate and, not surprisingly, it swung against them, particularly when Schmidt made the fatal debating error of dismissing the ability of the audience to judge the scientific nuances," ScientificAmerican.comï¿½s David Biello wrote.

The advocates of climate alarmism "were faced with the folksy anecdotes of Crichton and the oratorical fire of Stott," Biello wrote at ScientificAmerican.com.

Biello concluded, "ï¿½the audience responded to Crichton's satirical call for a ban on private jets more than Ekwurzel's vague we need to throw ï¿½everything we can at the climate crisis.ï¿½ By the final vote, 46 percent of the audience had been convinced that global warming was indeed not a crisis, while just 42 percent persisted in their opinion that it was."

Biello also criticized climate "crisis" advocate Richard Somerville as "perplexed" and "hardly inspiring."

Skepticï¿½s ï¿½Very Popularï¿½

Debate participant Schmidt lamented that the evening turned into one of futility for believers in a man-made global warming catastrophe.

"Crichton went with the crowd-pleasing condemnation of private jet-flying liberals - very popular, even among the private jet-flying Eastsiders present and the apparent hypocrisy of people who think that global warming is a problem using any energy at all."

Schmidt continued, "Stott is a bit of a force of nature and essentially accused anyone who thinks global warming is a problem of explicitly rooting for misery and poverty in the third world. He also brought up the whole cosmic ray issue as the next big thing in climate science."

Schmidt appeared so demoralized that he mused that debates equally split between believers of a climate ï¿½crisisï¿½ and scientific skeptics are probably not ï¿½worthwhileï¿½ to ever agree to again.

Selected Quotes from the climate debate from transcript: [Link to full debate pdf transcript]

Skeptical quotes from Novelist Michael Crichton:

"I would like to suggest a few symbolic actions that rightï¿½might really mean something. One of them, which is very simple, 99% of the American population doesnï¿½t care, is ban private jets. Nobody needs to fly in them, ban them now. And, and in addition, [APPLAUSE] "Letï¿½s have the NRDC (Natural Resources Defense Council), the Sierra Club and Greenpeace make it a rule that all of their members, cannot fly on private jets. They must get their houses off the [electrical] grid. They must live in the way that theyï¿½re telling everyone else to live. And if they wonï¿½t do that, why should we? And why should we take them seriously? [APPLAUSE]"

"I suddenly think about my friends, you know, getting on their private jets. And I think, well, you know, maybe they have the right idea. Maybe all that we have to do is mouth a few platitudes, show a good, expression of concern on our faces, buy a Prius, drive it around for a while and give it to the maid, attend a few fundraisers and youï¿½re done. Because, actually, all anybody really wants to do is talk about it."

"I mean, havenï¿½t we actually raised temperatures so much that we, as stewards of the planet, have to act? These are the questions that friends of mine ask as they are getting on board their private jets to fly to their second and third homes. [LAUGHTER]"

"Everyday 30,000 people on this planet die of the diseases of poverty. There are, a third of the planet doesnï¿½t have electricity. We have a billion people with no clean water. We have half a billion people going to bed hungry every night. Do we care about this? It seems that we donï¿½t. It seems that we would rather look a hundred years into the future than pay attention to whatï¿½s going on now. I think that's unacceptable. I think thatï¿½s really a disgrace."

Skeptical quotes of University of Londonï¿½s emeritus professor of biogeography Philip Stott:

"What we see in this is an enormous danger for politicians in terms of their hypocrisy. Iï¿½m not going to say anything about Al Gore and his house. [LAUGHTER] But it is a very serious point."

"In the early 20th century, 95% of scientists believe in eugenics. [LAUGHTER] Science does not progress by consensus, it progresses by falsification and by what we call paradigm shifts."

"The first Earth Day in America claimed the following, that because of global cooling, the population of America would have collapsed to 22 million by the year 2000. And of the average calorie intake of the average American would be wait for this, 2,400 calories, would good it were. [LAUGHTER] Itï¿½s nonsense and very dangerous. And what we have fundamentally forgotten is simple primary school science. Climate always changes."

"Angela Merkel the German chancellor, my own good prime minister (Tony Blair) for whom I voted -- let me emphasize, arguing in public two weeks ago as to who in Annie get the gun style could produce the best temperature. ï¿½I could do two degrees C said Angela.ï¿½ ï¿½No, I could only do three said Tony.ï¿½ [LAUGHTER] Stand back a minute, those are politicians, telling you that they can control climate to a degree Celsius.ï¿½

ï¿½And can I remind everybody that IPCC that we keep talking about, very honestly admits that we know very little about 80% of the factors behind climate change. Well letï¿½s use an engineer; I donï¿½t think Iï¿½d want to cross Brooklyn Bridge if it were built by an engineer who only understood 80% of the forces on that bridge. [LAUGHTER]ï¿½

Skeptical quotes of MITï¿½s Professor of Atmospheric Science Richard Lindzen:

"Now, much of the current alarm, I would suggest, is based on ignorance of what is normal for weather and climate."

"The impact on temperature per unit carbon dioxide actually goes down, not up, with increasing CO2. The role of anthropogenic greenhouse gases is not directly related to the emissions rate or even CO2 levels, which is what the legislation is hitting on, but rather to the impact of these gases on the greenhouse effect."

"The real signature of greenhouse warming is not surface temperature but temperature in the middle of the troposphere, about five kilometers. And that is going up even slower than the temperature at the surface."

Latest Global Average Tropospheric Temperatures

See this Graph:

Since 1979, NOAA satellites have been carrying instruments which measure the natural microwave thermal emissions from oxygen in the atmosphere. The signals that these microwave radiometers measure at different microwave frequencies are directly proportional to the temperature of different, deep layers of the atmosphere. Every month, John Christy and I update global temperature datasets (see here and here)that represent the piecing together of the temperature data from a total of eleven instruments flying on eleven different satellites over the years. As of early 2011, our most stable instrument for this monitoring is the Advanced Microwave Sounding Unit (AMSU-A) flying on NASAï¿½s Aqua satellite and providing data since late 2002.
The graph above represents the latest update; updates are usually made within the first week of every month. Contrary to some reports, the satellite measurements are not calibrated in any way with the global surface-based thermometer records of temperature. They instead use their own on-board precision redundant platinum resistance thermometers calibrated to a laboratory reference standard before launch.

Dr. Roy knows the real deal. Everyone else is wrong. He's right!

Why is the Arctic Circle 20 degrees hotter than it was?

This macaroon thinks he's saved the taxpayers money by delaying mitigation and green energy. He's actually help put us years behind, while helping ExxonMobil and BP.

"Spencer himself is up front about the politics surrounding his work. In July, he wrote on his blog that his job "has helped save our economy from the economic ravages of out-of-control environmental extremism," and said he viewed his role as protecting "the interests of the taxpayer." When asked why his work failed to gain mainstream acceptance, Spencer cited funding as a motivation for climate change researchers to find problems with the environment."

There are many BBCs. The one on DirecTV is actually run by the Discovery Channel as I recall. The World Service on the radio is the only BBC I halfway believe. That and Brucie's show.
